PROLOGUE, spoken by Mr. Hart.

Poets like Cadmus & Bullys, never do
At first, or second blow, submit to you;
But will provoke you still, and we're being done,
Till you are weary first, with laying on.

The late so bold Poets of this day,
Though he stands trembling, bids me boldly say,
When we before such Plays are us'd to do,
For Poets out of play, first drawn on you;

In a fierce Prologue, they still Pits desire,
And if you speak, like Cadmus, give the lye;
But though our Bayle Barrels oft I've fought,
And with bruis'd knuckles, their dear conquests bought;

Nay, never yet fear'd Odds upon the Stage,
In Prologue dare we flatter with the Age,
But would take Quarter from your saving hands,
Though Bayle within all yielding Countermands;

Says you Confessors, 'tis no Quarter give,
Therefore his Play shan't ask your leave to live;
Well, let the vain rash Poet, by bawling so,
Think to change the better terms of you.

But we the Affairs humbly will submit,
Now, and at any time, to a full Pit;
Nay, often we are brought to rage,
And murder Poets for you, on our Stage:

We set no Guards upon our Tiring-Room,
But when with flying Colours, there you come,
We patiently you see, giving up to you,
Our Tache, Whigs, and our Matrons too.

THE Country-Wife.

ACT I. SCENE I.

Enter Moxon, and Quack following him at a distance.

He.

A

Quack is as fit for a Flap, as a Midwife for a Band; they are ill but in their way, both helpers of Nature.—Exeunt—Well, my dear Doctor, hast thou done what I desired?

Qu. I have undone you for ever with the Wench, and reported you throughout the whole Town as bad as an Ewe, with as much trouble as if I had made you one in earnest.

He. But have you told all the Misdoers you know, the Orange Wench, at the Playhouse, the City Husbands, and old Fumbling Keepers of this end of the Town, for they'll be the readiest to report it.

Qu. I have told all the Chamber-maids, Waiting women, Tyne-women, and Old women of my acquaintance; now, and whisper it as a secret to 'em, and to be Whisperers of Whistles; so that you need not doubt 'twill spread, and you will be as odious to the handsome young Women, as—

He. As the small Fox.—Well—

Qu. And to the married Women of this end of the Town, as—

He. As the great enemy they are to their own Husbands.

Qu. And to the Gay Dames at Antientes Robs, of filthy and untemperable memory; and they will frighten their Children with your name, especially their Females.

He. And cry Moxon's coming to carry you away: I am only afraid 'twill not be believ'd; you told 'em it was by so English-French disaster, and an English-French Surgeon, who has given me at once, not only a Cure, but an Antidote for the future, against that damn'd melody, and that worse distemper, Jaws, and all other Women's evils.

Qu. Your late journey into France has made it the more credible.

Exeunt

The Country-Wife.

and your being here a fortnight before you appear'd in publick, looks as if you apprehended the Name, which I wonder you do not: Well I have been hired by young Gallants to help out other wags; but you are the first woud be thought a Man and for Women.

Mr. Dear Mr. Doctor, let vain Rogues be contented only to be thought wiser Men than they are, generally tis all the pleasure they have; but mine lies another way.

Qu. You take, methinks, a very preposterous way to it, and as ridiculous as if we Operators in Physick, should put forth Bills to disengage our Medicaments, with hopes to gain Customers.

Mr. Doctor, there are Quacks in love, as well as Physick, who get but the fewer and worse Patients for their boasting; a good name is seldom got by giving it ones self, and Women no more than Men are compass'd by bragging: Come, come Doctor, the wisest Lawyer never discovers the secrets of his craft till the trial; the wealthiest Man conceals his riches, and the cunningest Gamester his play; the Blacksmith and Keeper like old Books are not to be cheated, but by a new rapacious trick; false friendship will pass now for more than false Blue upon 'em; no, not in the City.

Enter Joy.

Joy. There are two Ladies and a Gentleman coming up.

Mr. A Pair, some unbelieving Sisters of my former acquaintance, whom you afraid, expect their sense shoud be satisfy'd of the fallacy of the report.

Enter Sir Jaip Fidget,

Mr.—this formal Fool and Women.

Lady Fidget, and Mrs.

Quinty Fidget.

Qu. His Wife and Sister.

Sr. Joy. My Coach breaking just now before your door, Sir, I look upon as an occasional reprimand to me Sir, for not killing your hands Sir, since your coming out of France Sir, and so my disaster Sir, has been my good fortune Sir, and this is my Wife, and Sister Sir.

Mr. What then, Sir?

Sr. Joy. My Lady, and Sister, Sir.—Wife, this is Master Storner.

La. Fid. Master Horner, Husband!

Sr. Joy. My Lady, my Lady Fidget, Sir.

Mr. Sir, Sir.

Sr. Joy. Woud't you be acquainted with her Sir?

Mr. The report is true, I find by his coldness or aversion to the Sex, but I'll play the wag with him. [Aside]

Pray salute my Wife, my Lady, Sir.

Mr. I will kiss no Mens Wives, Sir, nor him, Sir, I have taken my eternal Vow, Sir, of the Sex already, Sir.

Sr. Joy. Hah, hah, hah, I'll plague him yet.

[Aside]

Mr. Know my Wife, Sir?

Mr. I do know your Wife, Sir, she's a Woman, Sir, and consequently a Member, Sir, a greater Member than a Husband, Sir.

Sr. Joy. A Thousand thanks, Sir.

Mr. So, Sir, but I shall be more Cuckolds, Sir.

[Enter Storner]

Sr. Joy.

St. Jaf. Hah, hah, hah, Madam, Madam.

La Fid. Pray, Sir Jasper, be so kind to tell me this rude Fellow.

Mrs. Duns. Who, by his breeding, I don't think, he has ever been in France?

La Fid. Foh, he's but too much a French Fellow, such as hate Women of quality and virtue, for their love to their Husbands; St. Jaf.; a Woman is hated by him as much for losing her Husband, as for losing their Money: but pray let's be gone.

Her. You do well, Madam, for I have nothing that you came for: I have brought over not so much as a Bawdy Picture, new Postures, nor the second Part of the Ecole de Femmes; No.

Q. Hold for shame, Sir; what d'ye mean? you'll ruin your self for ever with the Sex. [Exit to Horner.]

St. Jaf. Hah, hah, hah, he hates Women perfectly I had.

Duns. What pay is he shou'd.

La Fid. Ay, he's a base rude Fellow for't; but affection makes not a Woman more odious to them, than Virtue.

Her. Because your Virtue is your greatest affectation, Madam.

La Fid. How, you Gawdy Fellow, would you wrong my honour?

Her. If I cou'd.

La Fid. How d'ye mean, Sir?

St. Jaf. Hah, hah, hah, no he can't wrong your Ladyship's honour, nor my honour: he poor Man——hark you in your ear——a most Runch.

La. O fishy French Beast, foh, foh; why do we stay? let's begone, I can't endure the sight of him.

St. Jaf. Stay, but till the Chairs come, they'll be here presently.

La. No, no.

St. Jaf. Nor can I stay longer; 'tis——let me see, a quarter and a half quarter of a minute past eleven; the Council will be late, I must away: business must be prefer'd always before Love and Ceremony with the wife Mr. Horner.

Her. And the innocent Sir Jasper.

St. Jaf. Ay, ay, the innocent Master Horner, hah, ha, ha.

La. What leave is with a filthy Man alone in his Lodgings?

St. Jaf. He's an innocent Man now, you know; pray stay, I'll hasten the Chairs to you——Mr. Horner your Servant, I shou'd be glad to see you at my house; pray come and dine with me, and play at Cards with my Wife after dinner, you are fit for Women at that game; yet hah, ha——'Tis as much a Husbands prudence to provide innocent diversion for a Wife, as to hinder her unlawful pleasures; and he had better employ her, than let her employ her self. [Alto.]

Farewell. [Exit Sir Jasper.]

Her. Your servant Sir Jasper, should I not be so too?

La. I will not stay with him, foh.

Her. Nay, Madam, I beseech you stay, I shou'd be so too, I can be as civil to ladies yet, as they will deserve.

The Country-Wife.

Lad. No, no, foh, you cannot be civil to Ladies.

Damn. You as civil as Ladies wou'd desire.

Lad. No, no, no, foh, foh, foh. [Exit Ladies Fid. and Dainty.]

Qu. Now I think, I, or you your self rather, have done your business with the Women.

Hor. Thou art an Ass, don't you see already, upon the report and my carriage, this grave Man of business leaves his Wife in my lodgings, invires me to his house and wife, who before wou'd not be acquainted with me out of jealousy.

Qu. Nay, by this means you may be the more acquainted with the Husbands, but the less with the Wives.

Hor. Let me alone, if I can but abuse the Husbands, I'll soon disabuse the Wives: Stay——I'll reckon you up the advantages, I am like to have by my Stratagem: First I shall be rid of all my old Acquaintances, the most insatiable sorts of Duns, that invade our lodgings in a morning: And next to the pleasure of making a New Mistress, is that of being rid of an old One, and of all old Debts; Love when it comes to be so, is paid the most unwillingly.

Qu. Well, you may be so rid of your old Acquaintances; but how will you get any new Ones?

Hor. Doctor, thou wilt never make a good Chymist, thou art so incredulous and impatient; ask but all the young Fellows of the Town, if they do not lose more time like Huntsmen, in starting the game, than in running it down; one knows not where to find 'em, who will, or will not; Women of Quality are so civil, you can hardly distinguish love from good breeding, and a Man is often mistaken; but now I can be sure, she that shews an aversion to me loves the sport, as those Women that are gone, whom I warrant to be right: And then the next thing, is your Women of Honour, as you call 'em, are only chary of their reputations, not their Persons, and 'tis scandal they wou'd avoid, nor Men: Now may I have, by the reputation of an Eunuch, the Priviledges of One; and be seen in a Ladies Chamber in a morning as early as her Husband; kiss Virgins before their Parents, or Lovers; and may be in short the Pas par tout of the Town. Now Doctor.

Qu. Nay, now you shall be the Doctor; and your Process is so new, that we do not know but it may succeed.

Hor. Not so new neither, Probatum est Doctor.

Qu. Well, I wish you luck and many Patients whilst I go to mine. [Exit Quack.]

Enter Harcourt, and Dorilant to Horner.

Har. Come, your appearance at the Play yesterday, has I hope hardned you for the future against the Womens contempt, and the Mens railery; and now you'l abroad as you were wont.

Hor. Did I not bear it bravely?

Dor. With a most Theatrical impudence; nay more than the Orange-Wenchs shew there, or a drunken Vizard Mask, or a great belly'd belly'd Actress; nay, or the most impudent of Creatures, an ill Poet; or what is yet more impudent, a second-hand Critick.

Hor. But what say the Ladies, have they no pitty?

Har. What Ladies? the Vizard Masques you know never pitty a Man when all's gone, though in their Service.

Dor. And for the Women in the Boxes, you'd never pitty them, when 'twas in your power.

Har. They say, 'tis pity but all that deal with common Women shou'd be serv'd so.

Dor. Nay, I dare swear, they won't admit you to play at Cards with them, go to Plays with 'em, or do the little duties which other Shadows of men are wont to do for 'em.

Har. Who do you call shadows of Men?

Dor. Half Men.

Har. What Boys?

Dor. Ay, your old Boys, old beaux-Garcons, who like superannuated Stallions are suffer'd to run, feed, and whinny with the Mares as long as they live, though they can do nothing else.

Har. Well, a Pox on love and wenching. Women serve but to keep a Man from better Company; though I can't enjoy them, I shall you the more: good fellowship and friendship, are lasting, rational and manly pleasures.

Har. For all that give me some of those pleasures, you call effeminate too, they help to relish one another.

Har. They disturb one another.

Har. No, Mistresses are like Books; if you pore upon them too much, they doze you, and make you unfit for Company; but if us'd discreetly, you are the fitter for conversation by 'em.

Dor. A Mistress shou'd be like a little Country Retreat near the Town, not to dwell in constantly, but only for a night and away; to taste the Town the better when a Man returns.

Har. I tell you, 'tis as hard to be a good Fellow, a good Friend, and a Lover of Women, as 'tis to be a good Fellow, a good Friend, and a Lover of Money: You cannot follow both, then choose your side; Wine gives you liberty, Love takes it away.

Dor. Gad, he's in the right on't.

Har. Wine gives you joy, Love grief and tortures; besides the Chirurgeon's Wine makes us witty, Love only Sots: Wine makes us sleep, Love breaks it.

Dor. By the World he has reason, Harcourt.

Har. Wine makes——

Dor. Ay, Wine makes us—— makes us Princes, Love makes us Beggars, poor Rogues, y gad—— and Wine——

Har. So, there's one converted.—— No, no, Love and Wine, Oil and Vinegar.

Har. I grant it; Love will still be uppermost.

Har. Come, for my part I will have only those glorious, manly pleasures of being very drunk, and very slovenly.

Enter.

Enter Boy.

Boy. Mr. Sparkish is below, Sir.

Har. What, my dear Friend? a Rogue that is fond of me, only I think for abusing him.

Dor. No, he can no more think the Men laugh at him, than that Women jilt him, his opinion of himself is so good.

Hor. Well, there's another pleasure by drinking, I thought not of, I shall lose his acquaintance, because he cannot drink: and you know 'tis a very hard thing to be rid of him, for he's one of those nauseous offerers at wit, who like the worst Fiddlers run themselves into all Companies.

Har. One, that by being in the Company of Men of sense wou'd pass for one.

Hor. And may so to the short-sighted World, as a false Jewel amongst true ones, is not discern'd at a distance; his Company is as troublesome to us, as a Cuckolds, when you have a mind to his Wife's.

Har. No, the Rogue will not let us enjoy one another, but ravishes our conversation, though he signifies no more to us, than Sir Martin Mar-all's gaping, and auker'd thrumming upon the Lute, does to his Man's Voice, and Mulick.

Dor. And to pass for a wit in Town, shews himself a fool every night to us, that are guilty of the plot.

Hor. Such wits as he, are, to a Company of reasonable Men, like Rooks to the Gamesters, who only fill a room at the Table, but are so far from contributing to the play, that they only serve to spoil the fancy of those that do.

Dor. Nay, they are us'd like Rooks too, snub'd, check'd, and abus'd; yet the Rogues will hang on.

Hor. A Pox on 'em, and all that force Nature, and wou'd be still what she forbids 'em; Affectation is her greatest Monster.

Har. Most Men are the contraries to that they wou'd seem; your bully you see, is a Coward with a long sword; the little humbly fawning Physician with his Ebony Cane, is he that destroys Men.

Dor. The Usurer, a poor Rogue, possess'd of moldy Bonds, and Mortgages; and we they call Spend-thrifts, are only wealthy, who lay out his money upon daily new purchases of pleasure.

Hor. Ay, your errantest Cheat, is your Trustee, or Executor; your jealous Man, the greatest Cuckold; your Church-man, the greatest Atheist; and your noisy pert Rogue of a wit, the greatest Fop, dullest Ass, and worst Company, as you shall see: For here he comes.

Enter Sparkish to them.

Spar. How is't, Sparks, how is't? Well Faith, Harry, I must railly thee a little, ha, ha, ha, upon the report in Town of thee, ha, ha, ha, I can't hold y Faith; shall I speak?

Har. Yes, but you'll be so bitter then.

Spar. Honest Dick and Frank, here shall answer for me, I will not be extream bitter by the Univerſe.

Har.

Har. We will be bound in ten thousand pound Bond, he shall not be bitter at all.

Dor. Nor sharp, nor sweet.

Har. What, not down right insipid?

Spar. Nay then, since you are so brisk, and provoke me, take what follows; you must know, I was discoursing and rallying with some Ladies yesterday, and they hapned to talk of the fine new Sigos in Town.

Har. Very fine Ladies I believe.

Spar. Said I, I know where the best new sign is. Where, says one of the Ladies? In Covent-Garden, I reply'd. Said another, in what Street? In Russel-street, answer'd I. Lord says another, I'm sure there was ne're a fine new sign there yesterday. Yes but there was, said I again, and it came out of France, and has been there a fortnight.

Dor. A Pox, I can hear no more, prethee.

Har. No hear him out; let him tune his crowd a while.

Har. The worst Musick the greatest preparation.

Spar. Nay faith, I'll make you laugh. It cannot be, says a third Lady. Yes, yes, quoth I again. Says a fourth Lady, ———

Har. Look to't, we'll have no more Ladies.

Spar. No. ——— then mark, mark, now, said I to the fourth, did you never see Mr. Hornér; he lodges in Russel-street, and he's a sign of a Man, you know, since he came out of France, heh, hah, he.

Har. But the Devil take me, if thine be the sign of a jest.

Spar. With that they all fell a laughing, till they bepiss'd themselves? what, but it does not move you, methinks? well see one had as good go to Law without a witness, as break a jest without a laughter on ones side. — Come, come Sparks, but where do we dine, I have left at Whitehall an Earl to dine with you.

Dor. Why, I thought thou hadst lov'd a Man with a title better, than a Suit with a French trimming to't.

Har. Go to him again.

Spar. No, Sir, a wit to me is the greatest title in the World.

Har. But go dine with your Earl. Sir, he may be exceptionous; we are your Friends, and will not take it ill to be left, I do assure you.

Har. Nay, faith he shall go to him.

Spar. Nay, pray Gentlemen.

Dor. We'll thrust you out, if you wo not, what disappoint any Body for us?

Spar. Nay, dear Gentlemen hear me.

Har. No, no, Sir, by no means; pray go Sir.

Spar. Why, dear Rogues.

Dor. No, no.

All. Ha, ha, ha.

Spar. But, Sparks, pray hear me; what d'ye think I'll eat then with gay shallow Fops, and silent Coxcombs? I think wit as necessary at dinner as a glass of good wine, and that's the reason I never have any stomach when I eat alone. — Come, but where do we dine?

Mor.

{ They all thrust him out of the room.

[Spar. returns.

Hor. Ev'n where you will.

Spar. At Chasteline's.

Dor. Yes, if you will.

Spar. Or at the Cook.

Dor. Yes, if you please.

Spar. Or at the Dog and Partridge.

Hor. Ay, if you have a mind to't, for we shall dine at neither.

Spar. Pshaw, with your fooling we shall lose the new Play; and I wou'd no more miss seeing a new Play the first day, than I wou'd miss setting in the wits Row; therefore I'll go fetch my Mistress and away.

[Exit Sparkish.]

Manent Horner, Harcourt, Dorillant; Enter to them

Mr. Pinchwife.

Hor. Who have we here, Pinchwife?

Mr. Pinch. Gentlemen, your humble Servant.

Hor. Well, Jack, by thy long absence from the Town, the grumness of thy countenance, and the slovenlyness of thy habit; I shou'd give thee joy, shou'd I not, of Marriage?

Mr. Pin. [Death does he know I'm married too? I thought to have conceal'd it from him at least.] [Aside.]

My long stay in the Country will excuse my dress, and I have a suite of Law, that brings me up to Town, that puts me out of humour; besides I must give Sparkish to morrow five thousand pound to lye with my Sister.

Hor. Nay, you Country Gentlemen rather than not purchase, will buy any thing, and he is a crackt Title, if we may quibble: Well, but am I to give thee joy, I heard thou wert marry'd?

Mr. Pin. What then?

Hor. Why, the next thing that is to be heard, is thou'rt a Cuckhold.

Mr. Pin. Insupportable name.

[Aside.]

Hor. But I did not expect Marriage from such a Whoremaster as you, one that knew the Town so much, and Women so well.

Mr. Pin. Why, I have marry'd no London Wife.

Hor. Pshaw, that's all one, that grave circumspection in marrying a Country Wife, is like refusing a deceitful pamper'd Smithfield Jade, to go and be cheated by a Friend in the Country.

Mr. Pin. A Fox on him and his Simile.

[Aside.]

At least we are little surer of the breed there, know what her keeping has been, whether foyl'd or unsound.

Hor. Come, come, I have known a clap gotten in Wales, and there are Cozens, Justices Clarks, and Chaplains in the Country, I won't say Coach-men, but she's handsome and young.

Pin. I'll answer as I shou'd do.

[Aside.]

No, no, she has no beauty, but her youth; no attraction, but her modesty, wholesome, homely, and huswifely, that's all.

Dor. He talks as like a Grazer as he looks.

Pin. She's too auker'd, ill-favour'd, and lilly to bring to Town.

Hor. Then methinks you shou'd bring her, to be taught breeding.

Pin.

The Country-Wife.

Pin. To be taught; no, Sir, I thank you, good Wives, and private Souldiers shou'd be ignorant. — [I'll keep her from your instructions, I warrant you.]

Har. The Rogue is as jealous, as if his wife were not ignorant. [Aside.]

Hor. Why, if she be ill favour'd, there will be less danger here for you, than by leaving her in the Country; we have such variety of dainties that we are seldom hungry.

Dor. But they have alwayes coarse, constant, swinging stomachs in the Country.

Har. Foul Feeders indeed.

Dor. And your Hospitality is great there.

Har. Open house, every Man's welcome.

Pin. So, so, Gentlemen.

Hor. But prethee, why woud'st thou marry her? if she be ugly, ill-bred, and silly, she must be rich then.

Pin. As rich as if she brought me twenty thousand pound out of this Town; for she'l be as sure not to spend her moderate portion, as a London Baggage wou'd be to spend hers, let it be what it wou'd: so 'tis all one: then because she's ugly, she's the likeliest to be my own; and being ill bred, she'l hate conversation; and since silly and innocent, will not know the difference betwixt a Man of one and twenty, and one of forty.

Hor. Nine ——— to my knowledge; but if she be silly, she'l expect as much from a Man of forty nine, as from him of one and twenty: But methinks wit is more necessary than beauty, and I think no young Woman ugly that has it, and no handsome Woman agreeable without it.

Pin. 'Tis my maxim, he's a Fool that marries; but he's a greater that does not marry a Fool; what is wit in a Wife good for, but to make a Man a Cuckold?

Hor. Yes, to keep it from his knowledge.

Pin. A Fool cannot contrive to make her husband a Cuckold.

Hor. No, but she'l club with a Man that can; and what is worse, if she cannot make her Husband a Cuckold, she'l make him jealous, and pass for one, and then 'tis all one.

Pin. Well, well, I'll take care for one, my Wife shall make me no Cuckold, though she had your help Mr. Hornor; I understand the Town, Sir.

Dor. His help!

Har. He's come newly to Town it seems, and has not heard how things are with him. [Aside.]

Hor. But tell me, has Marriage cured thee of whoring, which it seldom does.

Har. 'Tis more than age can do.

Hor. No, the word is, I'll marry and live honest; but a Marriage Vow is like a penitent Gamesters Oath, and entering into Bonds, and Penalties to stint himself to such a particular small sum at play for the future, which makes him but the more eager, and not being able to hold out, loses his Money again, and his forfeit to boot.

Dor.

Dor. Ay, ay, a Gamester will be a Gamester, whilst his Money lasts; and a Whoremaster, whilst his vigour.

Har. Nay, I have known 'em, when they are broke and can lose no more, keep a fumbling with the Box in their hands to fool with only, and hinder other Gamesters.

Dor. That had wherewithall to make lusty stakes.

Pin. Well, Gentlemen, you may laugh at me, but you shall never lye with my Wife, I know the Town.

Hor. But prethee, was not the way you were in better, is not keeping better than Marriage?

Pin. A Pox on't, the Jades wou'd jilt me, I cou'd never keep a Whore to my self.

Hor. So then you only marry'd to keep a Whore to your self; well, but let me tell you, Women, as you say, are like Souldiers, made constant and loyal by good pay, rather than by Oaths and Covenants, therefore I'd advise my Friends to keep rather than marry; since too I find by your example, it does not serve ones turn, for I saw you yesterday in the eighteen penny place with a pretty Country-wench.

Pin. How the Devil, did he see my Wife then? I sate there that she might not be seen; but she shall never go to a Play again. [Aside.]

Hor. What dost thou blush at nine and forty, for having been seen with a Wench?

Dor. No Faith, I warrant 'twas his Wife, which he seated there out of sight, for he's a cunning Rogue, and understands the Town.

Har. He blushes, then 'twas his Wife; for Men are now more ashamed to be seen with them in publick, than with a Wench.

Pin. Hell and damnation, I'm undone, since Horner has seen her, and they know 'twas she. [Aside.]

Hor. But prethee, was it thy Wife? she was exceedingly pretty; I was in love with her at that distance.

Pin. You are like never to be nearer to her. Your Servant, Gentlemen. [Offers to go.]

Hor. Nay, prethee stay.

Pin. I cannot, I will not.

Hor. Come you shall dine with us.

Pin. I have din'd already.

Hor. Come, I know thou hast not; I'll treat thee dear Rogue, thou shalt spend none of thy Hampshire Money to day.

Pin. Treat me; so he uses me already like his Cuckold. [Aside.]

Hor. Nay, you shall not go.

Pin. I must, I have business at home. [Exit. Pinchwife.]

Har. To beat his Wife, he's as jealous of her, as a Cheney Husband of a County garden Wife.

Hor. VVhy, 'tis as hard to find an old VVhoremaster without jealousy and the Gout, as a young one without fear or the Pox.

As Gout in Age, from Pox in Youth proceeds;

So VVenching past, then jealousy succeeds;

The worst diseafe that Love and VVenching breeds.

ACT.

ACT 2. SCENE I.

Mrs. Margery Pinchwife, and Alitheia : Mr. Pinchwife peeping behind at the door.

Mrs. Pin. PRAY, Sister, where are the best Fields and VVoods, to walk in in London?

Alit. A pretty Question; why Sister! Mulberry Garden, and St. James's Park; and for close walks the New Exchange.

Mrs. Pin. Pray, Sister, tell me why my Husband looks so grum here in Town? and keeps me up so close, and will not let me go a walking, nor let me wear my best Gown yesterday?

Alitb. O he's jealous Sister.

Mrs. Pin. Jealous, what's that?

Alitb. He's afraid you shou'd love another Man.

Mrs. Pin. How shou'd he be afraid of my loving another man, when he will not let me see any but himself.

Alitb. Did he not carry you yesterday to a Play?

Mrs. Pin. Ay but we sate amongst ugly People, he wou'd not let me come near the Gentry, who sate under us, so that I cou'd not see 'em: He told me none but naughty VVomen sate there, whom they tous'd and mous'd; but I wou'd have ventur'd for all that.

Alitb. But how did you like the Play?

Mrs. Pin. Indeed I was weary of the Play, but I lik'd hugely the Actors; they are the goodlyest proper't Men, Sister.

Alitb. O but you must not like the Actors, Sister.

Mrs. Pin. Ay, how shou'd I help it, Sister? Pray, Sister, when my Husband comes in, will you ask leave for me to go a walking?

Alitb. A walking, hah, ha; Lord, a Country Gentlewomans pleasure is the drudgery of a foot-post; and she requires as much airing as her Husbands Horses. [Aside.]

Enter. Mr. Pinchwife to them.

But here comes your Husband; I'll ask, though I'm sure he'l not grant it.

Mrs. Pin. He says he won't let me go abroad, for fear of catching the Pox.

Alitb. Fye, the small Pox you shou'd say.

Mrs. Pin. Oh my dear, dear Bud, welcome home; why dost thou look so fropish, who has nanger'd thee?

Mr. Pin. You're a Fool.

[Mrs. Pinch. goes aside, & cries.]

Alitb. Faith so she is, for crying for no fault, poor tender Creature!

Mr. Pin. VVhat you wou'd have her as impudent as your self, as errant a jilfirt, a gadder, a Magpy, and to say all, a meer notorious Town-A/Voman?

Alit. Brother, you are my only Censurer; and the honour of your Family

Family shall sooner suffer in your Wife there, than in me, though I take the innocent liberty of the Town.

Mr. Pin. Hark you Mistress, do not talk so before my Wife, the innocent liberty of the Town!

Alib. Why, pray, who boasts of any Intrigue with me? what Lam-poon has made my name notorious? what ill Women frequent my Lodgings? I keep no Company with any Women of scandalous reputations.

Mr. Pin. No, you keep the Men of scandalous reputations Company.

Alib. Where? wou'd you not have me civil? answer 'em in a Box at the Plays? in the drawing room at Whitehal? in St. James's Park? Mulberry-garden? or—

Mr. Pin. Hold, hold, do not teach my Wife, where the Men are to be found? I believe she's the worse for your Town documents already? I bid you keep her in ignorance as I do.

Mrs. Pin. Indeed be not angry with her Bud, she will tell me nothing of the Town, though I ask her a thousand times a day.

Mr. Pin. Then you are very inquisitive to know, I find?

Mrs. Pin. Not I indeed, Dear, I hate London; our Place-house in the Country is worth a thousand of't, wou'd I were there again.

Mr. Pin. So you shall I warrant; but were you not talking of Plays, and Players, when I came in? you are her encourager in such discourses.

Mrs. Pin. No indeed, Dear, she chid me just now for liking the Player Men.

Mr. Pin. Nay, if she be so innocent as to own to me her liking them, there is no hurt in't—

Come my poor Rogue, but thou lik'st none better then me? [Aside.]

Mrs. Pin. Yes indeed, but I do, the Player Men are finer Folks.

Mr. Pin. But you love none better then me?

Mrs. Pin. You are my own Dear Bud, and I know you, I hate a Stragger.

Mr. Pin. Ay my Dear, you must love me only, and not be like the naughty Town Women, who only hate their Husbands, and love every Man else, love Plays, Visits, fine Coaches, fine Cloaths, Fiddles, Balls, Treats, and so lead a wicked Town-life.

Mrs. Pin. Nay, if to enjoy all these things be a Town-life, London is not so bad a place, Dear.

Mr. Pin. How? if you love me, you must hate London.

Alib. The Fool has forbid me discovering to her the pleasures of the Town, and he is now setting her agog upon them himself.

Mrs. Pin. But, Husband, do the Town-women love the Player Men too?

Mr. Pin. Yes, I warrant you.

Mrs. Pin. Ay, I warrant you.

Mr. Pin. Why, you do not, I hope?

Mrs. Pin. No, no, Bud; but why have we no Player-men in the Coun-try?

Mr. Pin. Ha—Mrs. Minx, ask me no more to go to a Play.

Mrs. Pin.

Mrs. Pin. Nay, why, Love? I did not care for going; but when you forbid me, you make as't were desire it.

Alib. So'twill be in other things, I warrant.

[Aside.

Mrs. Pin. Pray, let me go to a Play, Dear.

Mr. Pin. Hold your Peace, I wo'not.

Mrs. Pin. Why, Love?

Mr. Pin. Why, I'll tell you.

Alib. Nay, if he tell her, she'll give him more cause to forbid her that place.

[Aside.

Mrs. Pin. Pray, why, Dear?

Mr. Pin. First, you like the Actors, and the Gallants may like you.

Mrs. Pin. What, a homely Country Girl? no Bud, no body will like me.

Mr. Pin. I tell you, yes, they may.

Mrs. Pin. No, no, you jest—I won't believe you, I will go.

Mr. Pin. I tell you then, that one of the lewdest Fellows in Town, who saw you there, told me he was in love with you.

Mrs. Pin. Indeed! who, who, pray who was't?

Mr. Pin. I've gone too far, and slipt before I was aware; how overjoy'd she is!

[Aside.

Mrs. Pin. Was it any Hampshire Gallant, any of our Neighbours? I promise you, I am beholding to him.

Mr. Pin. I promise you, you lye; for he wou'd but ruin you, as he has done hundreds: he has no other love for Women, but that, such as he, look upon Women like Basilisks, but to destroy 'em.

Mrs. Pin. Ay, but if he loves me, why should he ruin me? answer me to that: methinks he shou'd not, I wou'd do him no harm.

Alib. Hah, ha, ha.

Mr. Pin. 'Tis very well; but I'll keep him from doing you any harm, or me either.

Enter Sparkish and Harcourt.

But here comes Company, get you in, get you in.

Mrs. Pin. But pray, Husband, is he a pretty Gentleman, that loves me?

Mr. Pin. In baggage, in.

[Thrusts her in, shuts the door.

VWhat all the lewd Libertines of the Town brought to my Lodging, by this easie Coxcomb! S'death I'll not suffer it.

Spar. Here Harcourt, do you approve my choice? Dear, little Rogue, I told you I'd bring you acquainted with all my Friends, the wits and—[Harcourt salutes her.

Mr. Pin. Ay, they shall know her, as well as you your self will, I warrant you.

Spar. This is one of those, my pretty Rogue, that are to dance at your VWedding to morrow; and him you must bid welcome ever, to what you and I have.

Mr. Pin. Monstrous!—

[Aside.

Spar. Harcourt how dost thou like her, Faith? Nay, Dear, do not look look down; I should hate to have a VVife of mine out of countenance at any thing.

Mr. Pin. VVonderful!

Spar. Tell me, I say, Harcourt, how dost thou like her? thou hast star'd upon her enough, to resolve me.

Har. So infinitely well, that I cou'd wish I had a Mistress too, that might differ from her in nothing, but her love and engagement to you.

Alish. Sir, Master Sparkish has often told me, that his Acquaintance were all VVits and Raillieurs, and now I find it.

Spar. No, by the Universe, Madam, he does not railyly now; you may believe him: I do assure you, he is the honestest, worthiest, true hearted Gentleman—A man of such perfect honour, he wou'd say nothing to a Lady, he does not mean.

Mr. Pin. Praising another Man to his Mistress!

Har. Sir, you are so beyond expectation obliging, that—

Spar. Nay, I gad, I am sure you do admire her extreamly, I see't in your Eyes.—He does admire you Madam.—By the VVorld, don't you?

Har. Yes, above the VVorld, or, the most Glorious part of it, her whole Sex; and till now I never thought I shou'd have envied you, or any Man about to marry, but you have the best excuse for Marriage I ever knew.

Alish. Nay, now, Sir, I'm satisfied you are of the Society of the VVits, and Raillieurs, since you cannot spare your Friend, even when he is but too civil to you; but the surest sign is, since you are an Enemy to Marriage, for that I hear you hate as much as business or bad VVine.

Har. Truly, Madam, I was never an Enemy to Marriage, till now, because Marriage was never an Enemy to me before.

Alish. But why Sir, is Marriage an Enemy to you now? Because it robs you of your Friend here; for you look upon a Friend married, as one gone into a Monastery, that is dead to the VVorld.

Har. 'Tis indeed, because you marry him; I see Madam, you can guess my meaning: I do confess heartily and openly, I wish it were in my power to break the Match, by Heavens I wou'd.

Spar. Poor Franck!

Alish. VVou'd you be so unkind to me?

Har. No, no, 'tis not because I wou'd be unkind to you.

Spar. Poor Franck, no gad, 'tis only his kindness to me.

Pin. Great kindness to you indeed; insensible Fop, let a Man make love to his VVife to his face.

[Aside.

Spar. Come dear Franck, for all my VVife there that shall be, thou shalt enjoy me sometimes dear Rogue; by my honour, we Men of wit condole for our deceased Brother in Marriage, as much as for one dead in earnest. I think that was prettily said of me, ha Harcourt?—But come Franck, be not melancholly for me.

Har. No I assure you, I am not melancholly for you.

Spar. Prethee, Franck, dost think my VVife that shall be there a fine Person?

Har.

Har. I cou'd gaze upon her, till I became as blind as you are.

Spar. How, as I am! how!

Har. Because you are a Lover, and true Lovers are blind, stock-blind.

Spar. True, true; but by the World she has wit too, as well as beauty: go, go with her into a corner, and trye if she has wit, talk to her any thing, she's bashful before me.

Har. Indeed if a Woman wants wit in a corner, she has it no where.

Alith. Sir, you dispose of me a little before your time.

[Aside to Sparkish.

Spar. Nay, nay, Madam let me have an earnest of your obedience, or—go, go, Madam—

{ Harcourt courts
Alitheas aside.

Pin. How, Sir, if you are not concern'd for the honour of a Wife, I am for that of a Sister; he shall not debauch her: be a Pander to your own VVife, bring Men to her, let 'em make love before your Face, thrust 'em into a corner together, then leave 'em in private! is this your Town wit and conduct?

Spar. Hah, ha, ha, a silly wise Rogue, wou'd make one laugh more then a stark Fool, ha, ha: I shall burst. Nay you shall not disturb 'em; I'll vex thee, by the VVorld.

{ Struggles with Pinch, to keep him from Harc. and Alith.

Alith. The Writings are drawn, Sir, Settlements made; 'tis too late, Sir, and past all revocation:

Har. Then so is my death.

Alith. I wou'd not be unjust to him.

Har. Then why to me so?

Alith. I have no obligation to you.

Har. My love.

Alith. I had his before.

Har. You never had it; he wants you see jealousy, the only infallible sign of it.

Alith. Love proceeds from esteem; he cannot distrust my virtue, besides he loves me, or he wou'd not marry me.

Har. Marrying you, is no more sign of his love, then bribing your VVoman, that he may marry you, is a sign of his generosity: Marriage is rather a sign of interest, then love; and he that marries a fortune, covets a Mistress, not loves her: But if you take Marriage for a sign of love, take it from me immediately.

Alith. No, now you have put a scruple in my head; but in short, Sir, to end our dispute, I must marry him, my reputation wou'd suffer in the VVorld else.

Har. No; if you do marry him, with your pardon, Madam, your reputation suffers in the VVorld, and you wou'd be thought in necessity for a Cloak.

Alith. Nay, now you are rude, Sir.—Mr. Sparkish, pray come hither, your friend here is very troublesom, and very loving.

Har.

Har. Hold, hold,——

Mr. Pin. D'ye hear that?

Spar. Why, d'ye think I'll seem to be jealous, like a Country Bumpkin?

Mr. Pin. No, rather be a Cuckold, like a credulous Cit.

Har. Madam, you won'd not have been so little generous as to have told him.

Alib. Yes, since you cou'd be so little generous, as to wrong him.

Har. Wrong him, no Man can do't, he's beneath an injury; a Bubble, a Coward, a senseless Idiot, a Wretch so contemptible to all the World but you, that——

Alib. Hold, do not rail at him, for since he is like to be my Husband, I am resolv'd to like him: Nay, I think I am oblig'd to tell him, you are not his Friend.—Master Sparkish, Master Sparkish.

Spar. What, what; now dear Rogue, has not she wis?

Har. Not so much as I thought, and hoped she had.

Alib. Mr. Sparkish, do you bring People to rail at you? [Speaks surlily.]

Har. Madam——

Spar. How! no; but if he does rail at me, 'tis but in jest I warrant; what we wits do for one another, and never take any notice of it.

Alib. He spoke so scurrilously of you, I had no patience to hear him; besides he has been making love to me.

Har. True damn'd tell-tale Woman.

Spar. Pshaw, to shew his parts——we wits rail and make love often, but to shew our parts; as we have no affections, so we have no malice, we——

Alib. He said you were a Wretch, below an injury.

Spar. Pshaw.

Har. Damn'd, senseless, impudent, virtuous Jade; well since she won't let me have her, she'll do as good, she'll make me hate her.

Alib. A common Bubble.

Spar. Pshaw.

Alib. A Coward.

Spar. Pshaw, Pshaw.

Alib. A senseless driveling Idiot.

Spar. How, did he disparrage my parts? Nay, then my honour's concern'd, I can't put up that, Sir; by the World, Brother help me to kill him; [I may draw now, since we have the odds of him:—] 'tis a good occasion too before my Mistress]——

Alib. Hold, hold.

Spar. What, what.

Alib. I must not let 'em kill the Gentleman neither, for his kindness to me; I am so far from hating him, that I wish my Gallant had his person and understanding:——

[Nay if my honour——

[Aside.]
Spar.

Alib. Hold, hold, I used to tell the truth, the Gentleman said after all, that what he spoke, was but out of friendship to you.

Sparkish. Say, I am, I am, a Fool, that is no wit, out of friendship to me.

Alib. Yes, to try whether I was concern'd enough for you, and made known to me only to be satisfied of my virtue, for your sake.

Har. Kind however—

Spark. Nay, if it were so, my dear Rogue, I ask thee pardon; but why won't not you tell me so, faith.

Har. Because I did not think on't, faith.

Spark. Come, Har. does not come, Har. let's be gone to the new Play.— Come Madam.

Alib. I will not go, if you intend to leave me alone in the Box, and run into the Pit, as you use to do.

Spark. Pshaw, I'll leave Har. with you in the Box, to entertain you, and that's as good; if I fate in the Box, I shou'd be thought no Judge, but of Trimmings.— Come away Har., lead her down.

Pin. Well, go thy wayes, for the flower of the true Town Fops, such as spend their Estates, before they come to 'em, and are Cuckolds before they'r married. But let me go look to my own Free hold.— How—

Enter my Lady Fidget, Mistress Dainty Fidget, and Mistress Squeamish.

Lad. Your Servant, Sir, where is your Lady? we are come to wait upon her to the new Play.

Pin. New Play?

Lad. And my Husband will wait upon you presently.

Pin. Damn your civility—

Alib. Madam, by no means, I will not see Sir Sparkish here, till I have waited upon him at home; nor shall my Wife see you, till she has waited upon your Ladyship at your lodgings.

Lad. Now we are here, Sir—

Pin. No, Madam.

Daint. Pray, let us see her.

Squeam. We will not stir, till we see her.

Pin. A Pox on you all—

Alib. she has lock'd the door, and is gone abroad.

Lad. No, you have lock'd the door, and she's within.

Daint. They told us below, she was here.

Pin. [VWill nothing do?]—VWill it must out then, to tell you the truth, Ladies; which I was afraid to let you know before, lest it might endanger your lives, my Wife has just now the Small Pox come out upon her, do not be frighten'd; but pray, be gone Ladies, you shall not stay here in danger of your lives; pray get you gone Ladies.

Lad. No, no, we have all had 'em.

Squeam. Alack, alack!

Daint. Come, come, we must see how it goes with her, I understand the disease.

Lad. Come.

Lad. Indeed he is a bit of a ious, since Wives are so Neglected. I wonder there are no more jea-

Dain. So the little Fellow is grown a private Person—with her—
[Exit Sir Jasper, Horner, Dorilant.]

Lady. But still my dear, dear Honour—
[Enter Sir Jasper, Horner, Dorilant.]

Sr. Jas. Ay, my dear, dear of honour, thou hast still so much honour in thy mouth—

Hor. That she has none elsewhere—

Lady. Oh, what d'ye mean to bring in these upon us?

Dain. Foh, these are as bad as Wits.

Squeam. Foh!

Lady. Let us leave the Room.

Sr. Jas. Stay, stay, faith to tell you the naked truth—

Lady. Eye, Sir Jasper, do not use that word naked.

Sr. Jas. Well, well, in short I have business at Whitehal, and cannot go to the Play with you, therefore wou'd have you go—

Lady. With those two to a Play?

Sr. Jas. No, not with 'other, but with Mr. Horner, there can be no more scandal to go with him, than with Mr. Tattle, or Master Limbertum.

Lady. With that nasty Fellow? no—no.

Sr. Jas. Nay, prethee Dear, hear me. [Whispers to Lady Fid.]

Hor. Ladies. [Horner, Dorilant drawing near Squeam.]

Dain. Stand off. [L with and Dainc.]

Squeam. Do not approach us.

Dain. You heard with the wits, you are obscenity all over.

Squeam. And I wou'd as soon look upon a Picture of Adam and Eve, without fig leaves, as any of you, if I cou'd help it, therefore keep off, and do not make us sick.

Dain. What a Divil are these?

Hor. Why these are pretenders to honour, as Criticks to wit, only by censuring others; and as every raw, peevish, out-of-humour'd, affected, dull, Tea-drinking, Arithmetical Fop sets up for a wit, by railing at men of sense, so these for honour, by railing at the Court, and Ladies of as great honour, as quality.

Sr. Jas. Come, Mr. Horner, I must desire you to go, with these Ladies to the Play, Sir.

Sr. Jas. Ay, ay, come, Sir.

Hor. I must beg your pardon, Sir, and theirs, I will not be seen in Womens Company in publick again for the World.

Sr. Jas. Ha, ha, strange Aversion.

Squeam. No, he's for Womens company is private.

Sr. Jas. He—poor Man—het, bah, ha, ha.

Dain. 'Tis a greater shame amongst lewd fellows to be seen in virtuous Womens company, than for the Women to be seen with them.

Hor. Indeed, Madam, the time was I only hated virtuous Women.

Now I have the other two, I beg your pardon Ladies, I beg your pardon very obliging, Sir, because we would not be troubled with you.

Sr. Jas. In sober sadness he shall go.

Der. Nay, if he wo't, I am ready to wait upon the Ladies; and I think I am the fitter Man.

Sr. Jas. You, Sir, no I thank you for that—Master Hornor is a Priviledg'd Man amongst the virtuous Ladies, 'twill be a great while before you are so; heh, he, he, he's my VVive's Gallant, heh, he, he; no pray withdraw, Sir, for as I take it, the virtuous Ladies, have no business with you.

Der. And I am sure he can have none with them: 'tis strange a Man can't come amongst virtuous VVomen now, but upon the same terms, as Men are admitted into the great Turke Seraglio; but Heavens keep me, from being an hombre Player with 'em: but where is Pinchwife—

[Exit Dorilant.]

Sr. Jas. Come, come, Man; what avoid the sweet society of VVoman-kind? that sweet, soft, gentle, tame, noble Creature VVoman, made for Man's Companion—

Der. So is that soft, gentle, tame, and more noble Creature a Spaniel, and has all their tricks, can fawn, lye down, suffer beating, and fawn the more; barks at your Friends, when they come to see you; makes your bed hard, gives you Fleas, and the mange sometimes: and all the difference is, the Spaniel's the more faithful Animal, and fawns but upon one Master.

Sr. Jas. Heh, he, he,

Squinn. O the rude Beast!

Der. Insolent brute.

Land. Brute! stinking mortify'd rotten French VVeather, to dare—

Sr. Jas. Hold, an't please your Ladyship; for shame Master Hornor, your Mother was a VVoman—[Now shall I never reconcile 'em] [Aside. Hark you, Madam, take my advice in your anger; you know you often want one to make up your drooling pack of hombre players; and you may cheat him easily, for he's an ill Gamester, and consequently loves play; Besides you know, you have but two old civil Gentlemen (with stinking breath too) to wait upon you abroad, take in the third into your service; the other a but crazy: and a Lady shou'd have a supernumerary Gentleman-Usher, as a supernumerary Coach-horse, lest sometimes you shou'd be forc'd to stay at home.

Land. But are you sure he loves play, and has money?

Sr. Jas. He loves play as much as you, and has money as much as I.

Land. You are contented to make him pay for his scurrillity; money makes him secure all other wants in Men—Those whom we cannot make good for Gallants, we make for—[Aside.]

Sr. Jas. So, so; now to mollify, to wheedle him,—[Aside.]

Land. Master Hornor will you never keep civil Company, methinks 'tis time now, since you are only fit for them: Come, come, Man you must e'en fall to visiting visiting our Wives, eating at our Tables, drinking Tea with our vir-tuous Relations after dinner, dealing Cards to 'em, reading Plays, and Gazets to 'em, picking Fleas out of their Shocks for 'em, collecting Receipts, New Songs, Women, Pages, and Footmen for 'em.

Hor. I hope they'll afford me better Employment, Sir.

Sr. Jas. Heh, he, he, 'tis fit you know your work before you come into your place; and since you are unprovided of a Lady to flatter, and a good house to eat at, pray frequent mine, and call my Wife Mistress, and she shall call you Gallant, according to the custom.

Hor. Who? —

Sr. Jas. Faith, thou sh't for my sake, come for my sake only.

Hor. For your sake —

Sr. Jas. Come, come, here's a Gamester for you, let him be a little familiar sometimes; nay, what if a little rude; Gamesters may be rude with Ladies, you know.

Lad. Yes, losing Gamesters have a privilege with VVomen.

Hor. I always thought the contrary, that the winning Gamester had most privileged with VVomen, for when you have lost your money to a Man, you'll lose any thing you have, all you have, they say, and he may use you as he pleases.

Sr. Jas. Heh, he, he, well, win or lose you shall have your liberty with her.

Lad. As he behaves himself; and for your sake I'll give him admittance and freedom.

Hor. All sorts of freedom, Madam?

Sr. Jas. Ay, ay, ay, all sorts of freedom thou can'st take, and so go to her, begin thy new imployment; wheedle her, jest with her, and be better acquainted one with another.

Hor. I think I know her already, therefore may venture with her, my secreter for hers —

[Aside.]

[Horner, and Lady Fidget whisper.]

Sr. Jas. Sister Cuz, I have provided an innocent Play-fellow for you there.

Dain. VVho, he!

Squeam. There's a Play-fellow indeed.

Sr. Jas. Yes sure, what he is good enough to play at Cards, Blind-mans buff, or the fobll with sometimes.

Squeam. Foh, we'll have no such Play-fellows.

Dain. No, Sir, you shan't choose Play-fellows for us, we thank you.

Sr. Jas. Nay, pray hear me.

[Whispering to them.]

Lad. But, poor Gentleman, cou'd you be so generous? to truly a Man of honour, as for the sakes of us VVomen of honour, to cause your self to be reported no Man? No Man! and to suffer your self the greatest shame that cou'd fall upon a Man, that none might fall upon us VVomen by your conversation; but indeed, Sir, as perfectly, perfectly, the same Man as before your going into France, Sir, as perfectly, perfectly, Sir.

Hor.

Hor. As perfectly, perfectly, Madam; nay, I scorn you shou'd take my word; I desire to be try'd only, Madam.

Lad. VVell, that's spoken again like a Man of honour, all Men of honour desire to come to the test: But indeed, generally you Men report such things of your selves, one does not know how, or whom to believe; and it is come to that pass, we dare not take your words no more than your Taylors, without some staid Servant of yours be bound with you; but I have so strong a faith in your honour, dear, dear, noble Sir, that Pd forfeit mine for youts at any time, dear Sir.

Hor. No, Madam, you shou'd not need to forfeit it for me, I have given you security already to save you harmless, my late reputation being so well known in the VVorld, Madam.

Lady. But if upon any future falling out, or upon a suspicion of my taking the trust out of your hands, to employ some other, you your self shou'd betray your trust, dear Sir; I mean, if you'l give me leave to speak obscenely, you might tell, dear Sir.

Hor. If I did, no body wou'd believe me; the reputation of impotency is as hardly recover'd again in the World, as that of cowardise, dear Madam.

Lad. Nay then, as one may say, you may do your worst, dear, dear, Sir.

Sr. Jas. Come, is your Ladyship reconciled to him yet? have you agreed on matters? for I must be gone to Whitehal.

Lad. Why indeed, Sir Jasper, Master Horner is a thousand, thousand times a better Man, than I thought him: Cosen Squeamish, Sister Dainty, I can name him now, truly not long ago you know, I thought his very name obscenity, and I wou'd as soon have lain with him, as have nam'd him.

Sr. Jas. Very likely, poor Madam.

Dain. I believe it.

Squeam. No doubt on't.

Sr. Jas. Well, well—that your Ladyship is as virtuous as any she, I know, and him all the Town knows—heh, he, he; therefore now you like him, get you gone to your business together; go, go, to your business, I say, pleasure, whilst I go to my pleasure, business.

Lad. Come then dear Gallant.

Hor. Come away, my dearest Mistress.

Sr. Jas. So, so, why, 'tis as Pd have it.

[Exit Sr. Jasper.]

Hor. And as Pd have it.

Lad. Who for his business, from his Wife will run;

Takes the best care, to have her business done.

[Exit omnes.]

ACT 3. SCENE 1.

Alithea, and Mrs. Pinchwife.

Alithea. Sister, What ailes you, you are grown melancholly?

Mrs. Pin. Wou'd it not make any one melancholly, to see you go every day fluttering about abroad, whilst I must stay at home like a poor lonely, sullen Bird in a Cage?

Alithea.

Alib. Ay, Sister, but you came young, and just from the nest to your cage, so that I thought you lik'd it; and could be as cheerful in't, as others that took their flight themselves early, and are hopping abroad in the open Air.

Mr. Pin. Nay I confess I was quiet enough, till my Husband told me, what pure lives the London Ladies live abroad, with their dancing, meetings, and junketings, and dress every day in their best Gowns; and I warrant you, play at Nine-Pins every day of the week, so they do.

Enter. Mr. Pinchwife.

Mr. Pin. Come, what's here to do? you are putting the Town Pleasures in her head, and setting her a longing.

Alib. Yes, after Nine-pins; you suffer none to give her those longings, you mean, but your self.

Mr. Pin. I tell her of the vanities of the Town, like a Confessor.

Alib. A Confessor! just such a Confessor, as he that by forbidding a silly Oastler, to grease the Horses teeth, taught him to do it.

Mr. Pin. Come Mistress Flippant, good Precepts are lost, when bad Examples are still before us; the liberty you take abroad makes her hanker after it; and out of humour at home, poor Wretch! she desired not to come to London, I wou'd bring her.

Alib. Very well.

Mr. Pin. She has been this week in Town, and never desired, till this afternoon, to go abroad.

Alib. Was she not at a Play yesterday?

Mr. Pin. Yes, but she ne'er ask'd me; I was my self the cause of her going.

Alib. Then if she ask you again, you are the cause of her asking, and not my example.

Mr. Pin. Well, to morrow night I shall be rid of you; and the next day before 'tis light, she and I'll be rid of the Town, and my dreadful apprehensions: Come, be not melancholly, for thou shalt go into the Country as fast to morrow, Dearest.

Alib. Great comfort.

Mr. Pin. Pish, what d'ye tell me of the Country, for?

Mr. Pin. How's this! what, pish at the Country?

Mr. Pin. Let me alone, I am not well.

Mr. Pin. O, if that be all — what ailes my dearest?

Mr. Pin. Truly I don't know; but I have not been well, since you told me there was a Gallant at the Play in love with me.

Mr. Pin. Ha —

Alib. That's by my example, too.

Mr. Pin. Nay, if you are not well, but are so concern'd, because a low d fellow chanc'd to lye, and say he lik'd you, you'll make me sick too.

Mr. Pin. Of what disease? Alib. Of that which is worse than the Plague, Jealousy.
Mr. Pin. Pish; you fear, I'm sure there's no such disease in our Receipt-book at home.

Alib. Mr. Pin. No, thou never met'st with it, poor innocent—well, I have told me, 'twill be my own fault—for Cuckolds and Bastards, are generally makers of their own fortune. [Aside.]

Mr. Pin. Well, but pray Bud, let's go to a Play to night.
Mr. Pin. 'Tis just done, she comes from it; but why are you so eager to see a Play?

Mrs. Pin. Faith Dear, not that I care one pin for their talk there; but I like to look upon the Player-men, and wou'd see, if I cou'd, the Gallant you say loves me, that's all dear Bud.

Mr. Pin. Is that all dear Bud?
Alib. This proceeds from my Example.

Mrs. Pin. But if the Play be done, let's go abroad however, dear Bud.
Mr. Pin. Come have a little patience, and thou shalt go into the Country on Friday.

Mrs. Pin. Therefore I wou'd see first some sights, to tell my Neighbours of. Nay, I will go abroad, that's once.

Alib. For the cause of this desire too.

Mr. Pin. But now I think on't, who who was the cause of Horners coming to my Lodging to day? that was you.

Alib. No, you, because you wou'd not let him see your handsome Wife out of your Lodging.

Mrs. Pin. Why, O Lord! did the Gentleman come hither to see me indeed?

Mr. Pin. No, no;—You are not cause of that damn'd question too, Mistress Alib.—[Well she's in the right of it; he is in love with my Wife—and comes after her—'tis so—but I'll nip his love in the bud; lest he shou'd follow us into the Country, and break his Chariot-wheel near our house, on purpose for an excuse to come to't; but I think I know the Town.] [Aside.]

Mrs. Pin. Come, pray Bud, let's go abroad before 'tis late; for I will go, that's flat and plain.

Mr. Pin. So! the obstinacy already of the Town-wife, and I must, whilst she's here, humour her like one. [Aside.]
 Sister, how shall we do, that she may not be seen, or known?

Alib. Let her put on her Mask.

Mr. Pin. Pshaw, a Mask makes People but the more inquisitive, and is as ridiculous a disguise, as a Stage-beard; her shape, stature, habit will be known; and if we shou'd meet with Horners, he wou'd be sure to take acquaintance with us, must with her joy, kiss her, talk to her, leer upon her, and the Devil and all; no, I'll not use her to a Mask, 'tis dangerous; for Masks have made more Cuckolds, than the best faces that ever were known.

Alib. How will you do then?

Unintentionally bowed

Mrs. Pin.

Har. But, why should'st thou hate the silly Poets, thou hast too much wit to be one, and they like Whores are only hated by each other; and thou dost scorn writing, I'm sure.

Spar. Yes, I'd have you to know, I scorn writing; but Women, Women, that make Men do all foolish things, make 'em write Songs too; every body does it: 'tis ev'n as common with Lovers, as playing with fans; and you can no more help Rhyming to your Phyllis, than drinking to your Phyllis.

Har. Nay, Poetry in love is no more to be avoided, than jealousy.

Dor. But the Poets damn'd your Songs, did they?

Spar. Damn the Poets, they turn'd 'em into Burlesque, as they call it; that Burlesque is a Hocus-Pocus trick, they have got, which by the virtue of Hicinus doctus, topsey turvey, they make a wise and witty Man in the World, a Fool upon the Stage you know not how; and 'tis therefore I hate 'em too, for I know not but it may be my own case; for they'l put a Man into a Play for looking a Squint: Their Predecessors were contented to make Serving-men only their Stage-Fools, but these Rogues must have Gentlemen, with a Pox to 'em, nay Knights; and indeed you shall hardly see a Fool upon the Stage, but he's a Knight; and to tell you the truth, they have kept me these six years from being a Knight in earnest, for fear of being Knighted in a Play, and dubb'd a Fool.

Dor. Blame 'em not, they must follow their Copy, the Age.

Har. But why should'st thou be afraid of being in a Play, who expose your self every day in the Play-houses, and as publick Places.

Har. 'Tis but being on the Stage, instead of standing on a Bench in the Pit.

Dor. Don't you give money to Painters to draw you like? and are you afraid of your Pictures, at length in a Play-house, where all your Mistresses may see you.

Spar. A Pox, Painters don't draw the Small Pox, or Pimples in ones face; come damn all your silly Authors what-ever, all Books and Book-sellers, by the World, and all Readers, courteous or uncourteous.

Har. But, who comes here, Sparkish?

Enter Mr. Pinchwife, and his Wife in Many Cloaths.

Alithea, Lucy her Maid.

Spar. Oh hide me, there's my Mistress too.

Sparkish hides himself behind Harcourt.

Har. She sees you.

Spar. But I will not see her, 'tis time to go to Whitehal, and I must not fail the drawing Room.

Har. Pray, first carry me, and reconcile me to her.

Spar. Another time, faith the King will have sup'r.

Har. Not with the worse stomach for thy absence, thou art one of those Fools, that think their attendance at the King's Meals, as necessary as his Physicians, when you are more troublesom to him, than his Doctors, or his Dogs.

Spar. Pshaw, I know my interest, Sir, prethee hide me.

Hor. Your Servant, Pinchwife, — what he knows us not —

Mr. Pin. Come along.

[To his Wife aside.

Mrs. Pin. Pray, have you any Ballads, give me six-penny worth?

Clasp. We have no Ballads.

Mrs. Pin. Then give me Covent-Garden Drollery, and a Play or two — Oh here's Tariver's VViles, and the Slighted Maiden, I'll have them.

Mr. Pin. No, Playes are not for your reading; come a-long, will you discover yout self? [Apert to her.

Hor. VVho is that pretty Youth with him, Sparkish?

Spar. I believe his VVife's Brother, because he's something like her, but I never saw her but once.

Hor. Extremely handsom, I have seen a face like it too; let us follow 'em.

[Exeunt Pinchwife, Mistress Pinchwife.

[Alithea, Lucy, Horner, Dorilant following them.

Hor. Come, Sparkish, your Mistress saw you, and will be angry you go not to her; besides I wou'd fain be reconcil'd to her, which none but you can do, dear Friend.

Spar. VVell that's a better reason, dear Friend, I wou'd not go near her now, for her's, or my own sake, but I can deny you nothing; for though I have known thee a great while, never go, if I do not love thee, as well as a new acquaintance.

Hor. I am oblig'd to you indeed, dear Friend, I wou'd be well with her only, to be well with thee still; for these ties to VVives usually dissolve all ties to Friends: I wou'd be contented, she shou'd enjoy you a nights, but I wou'd have you to my self a dayes, as I have had, dear Friend.

Spar. And thou shalt enjoy me a dayes, dear, dear Friend, never stir, and I'll be divorced from her, sooner than from thee, come along —

Hor. So, we are hard put to't, when we make our Rival our Procurer; but neither she, nor her Brother, wou'd let me come near her now; when all's done, a Rival is the best cloak to steal to a Mistress under, without suspicion; and when we have once got to her as we desire, we throw him off like other Cloaks.

[Aside.

[Exit Sparkish, and Harcourt following him.

Re-enter Mr. Pinchwife, Mistress Pinchwife in Man's Cloaths.

Mr. Pin. Sister, if you will not go, we must leave you —

[To Alithea.

The Fool her Gallant, and she, will muster up all the young Sangerers of this place, and they will leave their dear Semstresses to follow us; what a swarm of Cuckolds, and Cuckold-makers are here? [Aside. Come let's be gon Mistress Margery.

Mrs. Pin. Don't you believe that, I han't half my belly full of fights yet.

Mr. Pin. Then walk this way.

Mrs. Pin.

Mrs. Pin. Nay, shall we go? the Exchange will be shut, and I have a mind to see that.

Mr. Pin. So—I have it—I'll dress her up in the Suit, we are to carry down to her Brother, little Sir James; nay, I understand the Town tricks: Come let's go dress her; a Mask! no—a Woman mask'd, like a cover'd Dish, gives a Man curiosity, and appetite, when, it may be, uncover'd, 'twou'd turn his stomach; no, no.

Alab. Indeed your comparison is something a greasie one: but I had a gentle Gallant, us'd to say, a Beauty mask'd, like the Sun in Eclipse, gathers together more gazers, than if it shin'd out. [Exeunt.]

The Scene changes to the New Exchange: Enter Horner, Harcourt, Dorilant.

Dor. Engag'd to Women, and not Sup with us?

Hor. Ay, a Pox on 'em all.

Har. You were much a more reasonable Man in the morning, and had as noble resolutions against 'em, as a Widdower of a weeks liberty.

Dor. Did I ever think, to see you keep company with Women in vain?

Hor. In vain! no——'tis, since I can't love 'em, to be reveng'd on 'em.

Har. Now your Sting is gone, you look'd in the Box amongst all those Women, like a drone in the hive, all upon you; shov'd and ill us'd by 'em all, and thrust from one side to t'other.

Dor. Yet he must be buzzing amongst 'em still, like other old beetle-headed, lycorish drones; avoid 'em, and hate 'em as they hate you.

Hor. Because I do hate 'em, and wou'd hate 'em yet more, I'll frequent 'em; you may see by Marriage, nothing makes a Man hate a Woman more, than her constant conversation: In short, I converse with 'em, as you do with rich Fools, to laugh at 'em, and use 'em ill.

Dor. But I wou'd no more Sup with Women, unless I cou'd lye with 'em, than Sup with a rich Coxcomb, unless I cou'd cheat him.

Hor. Yes, I have known thee Sup with a Fool, for his drinking, if he cou'd set out your hand that way only, you were satisfy'd; and if he were a Wine-swallowing mouth 'twas enough.

Har. Yes, a Man drinks often with a Fool, as he tosses with a Marker, only to keep his hand in Ure; but do the Ladies drink?

Hor. Yes, Sir, and I shall have the pleasure at least of laying 'em flat with a Bottle; and bring as much scandal that way upon 'em, as formerly t'other.

Har. Perhaps you may prove as weak a Brother amongst 'em that way, as t'other.

Dor. Foh, drinking with Women, is as unnatural, as scolding with 'em; but 'tis a pleasure of decay'd Fornicators, and the basest way of quenching Love.

Har. Nay, 'tis drowning Love, instead of quenching it; but leave us for civil Women too!

Dor. Ay, when he can't be the better for 'em; we hardly pardon a Man, that leaves his Friend for a Wench, and that's a pretty lawful call.

Hor. Faith, I wou'd not leave you for 'em, if they wou'd not drink.

Dor. Who wou'd disappoint his Company at Lewis's, for a Gossiping?

Har. Foh, Wine and Women good apart, together as nauseous as Sack and Sugar: But hark you, Sir, before you go, a little of your advice, an old maim'd General, when unfit for action, is fittest for Counsel; I have other designs upon Women, than eating and drinking with them: I am in love with Sparkish's Mistress, whom he is to marry to morrow, now how shall I get her?

Enter Sparkish, looking about.

Hor. Why, here comes one will help you to her.

Har. He! he, I tell you, is my Rival, and will hinder my love.

Hor. No, a foolish Rival, and a jealous Husband assist their Rivals designs; for they are sure to make their Women hate them, which is the first step to their love for another Man.

Har. But I cannot come near his Mistress, but in his company.

Hor. Still the better for you, for Fools are most easily cheated, when they themselves are accessaries; and he is to be bumbled of his Mistress, as of his Money, the common Mistress, by keeping him company.

Spar. Who is that, that is to be bumbled? Faith let me snack, I have met with a buble since Christmas: gad, I think bubbles are like their Brother Woodcocks, go out with the cold weather.

Har. A Pox, he did not hear all I hope. [Apart to Horner.]

Spar. Come, you bubbling Rogues you, where do we sup—Oh, Har-cours, my Mistress tells me, you have been making fierce love to her all the Play long, ha, ha—but I——

Har. I make love to her?

Spar. Nay, I forgive thee; for I think, I know thee, and I know her, but I am sure I know my self.

Har. Did she tell you so? I see all Women are like these of the Exchange, who to enhance the price of their commodities, report to their fond Customers offers which were never made 'em.

Hor. Ay, Women are apt to tell before the intrigue, as Men after it, and so shew themselves the vainer Sex; but hast thou a Mistress, Sparkish? 'tis as hard for me to believe it, as that thou ever had'st a buble, as you brag'd just now.

Spar. O your Servant, Sir; are you at your raillery, Sir? but we are some of us beforehand with you to day at the Play: the Wits were something bold with you, Sir; did you not hear us laugh?

Har. Yes, But I thought you had gone to Plays, to laugh at the Poets wit, not at your own.

Spar. Your Servant, Sir, no I thank you; gad I go to a Play as to a Country-treat, I carry my own wine to one, and my own wit to t'other, or else I'm sure I shou'd not be merry at either; and the reason why we are so often louder than the Players, is, because we think we speak more wit, and so become the Poets Rivals in his audience: for to tell you the truth, we hate the silly Rogues; nay, so much, that we find fault even with their Bawdy upon the Stage, whilst we talk nothing else in the Pit as lowd.

Turn back to page 27

you shall stay, with your pardon, since you have not yet understood him, till he has made an eclairsissement of his love to you, that is what kind of love it is; answer to thy Catechisme: Friend, do you love my Mistress here?

Har. Yes, I wish she wou'd not doubt it.

Spar. But how do you love her?

Har. VVith all my Soul.

Alith. I thank him, methinks he speaks plain enough now.

Spar. You are out still. [To Alitheas] But with what kind of love, Harcourt?

Har. With the best, and truest love in the World.

Spar. Look you there then, that is with no matrimonial love, I'm sure.

Alith. How's that, do you say matrimonial love is not best?

Spar. Gad, I went too far e're I was aware: But speak for thy self

Harcourt, you said you wou'd not wrong me, nor her.

Har. No, no, Madam, e'en take him for Heaven's sake.

Spar. Look you there, Madam.

Har. Who shou'd in all justice be yours, [Claps his hand on his breast] he that loves you most.

Alith. Look you there, Mr. Sparkish, who's that?

Spar. Who shou'd it be? go on Harcourt.

Har. Who loves you more than VVomen Titles, or Fortune Fools.

[Points at Sparkish]

Spar. Look you there, he means me still, for he Points at me.

Alith. Ridiculous!

Har. Who can only match your Faith, and Constancy in love.

Spar. Ay.

Har. VVho knows, if it be possible, how to value so much beauty and virtue.

Spar. Ay.

Har. VVhose love can no more be equal'd in the world, than that Heavenly form of yours.

Spar. No.

Har. VVho cou'd no more suffer a Rival, than your absence, and yet cou'd no more suspect your virtue, than his own constancy in his love to you.

Spar. No.

Har. VVho in fine loves you better than his eyes, that fast made him love you.

Spar. Ay.

Alith. Have a care, lest you make me stay too long.

Spar. But till he has saluted you, that I may be assur'd you are friends, after his honest advice and declaration: Come pray, Madam, be friends with him.

[Enter Master Pinchwife, Mistress Pinchwife.]

Alith. You must pardon me, Sir, that I am not yet so obedient to you.

[Exit Master Pinchwife, Mistress Pinchwife.]

[Exit Master Pinchwife, Mistress Pinchwife.]

[Exit Master Pinchwife, Mistress Pinchwife.]

Mrs. Pin. What, invite your wife to kiss Men? Monstrous! are you not ashamed? I VVill never forgive you.

Spar. Are you not ashamed, that I shou'd have more confidence in the chastity of your Family, than you have; you must not teach me, I am a man of honour, Sir, though I am frank and free; I am frank, Sir—

Mr. Pin. Very frank, Sir, to share your VVife with your friends.

Spar. He is an humble, Menial Friend, such as reconciles the differences of the Marriage-bed; you know man and VVife do not always agree, I design him for that use, therefore wou'd have him well with my VVife.

Mr. Pin. A menial friend—you will get a great many menial Friends, by showing your VVife as you do.

Spar. VVhat then, it may be I have a pleasure in't, as I have to shew fine Clothes; at a Play-house the first day, and count money before poor Rogues.

Mr. Pin. He that shews his wife, or money, will be in danger of having them borrowed sometimes.

Spar. I love to be envy'd, and wou'd not marry a VVife, that I alone cou'd love; loving alone is as dull, as eating alone; is it not a frank age, and I am a frank Person? and to tell you the truth, it may be I love to have Rivals in a VVife, they make her seem to a Man still, but as a kept Mistress; and so good night; for I must to Whitchul. Madam, I hope you are now reconcil'd to my Friend; and so I wish you a good night, Madam, and sleep if you can, for to morrow you know I must visit you early with a Canonical Gentleman. Good night dear Harcourt.

Har. Madam, I hope you will not refuse my visit to morrow, if it shou'd be earlier with a Canonical Gentleman, than Mr. Sparkish's?

Mr. Pin. This Gentlewoman is yet under my care, therefore you must yet forbear your freedom with her, Sir.

Coming between Alithea and Harcourt.

Har. Must, Sir—

Mr. Pin. Yes, Sir, she is my Sister.

Har. 'Tis well she is, Sir—for I must be her Servant, Sir. Madam—

Mr. Pin. Come away Sister, we had been gone, if it had not been for you, and so avoided these lewd Rakehells, who seem to haunt us.

Enter Horner, Dorilant to them.

Hor. How now Pinchwife?

Mr. Pin. Your Servant.

Hor. VVhat, I see a little time in the Country makes a Man turn wild and unsociable, and only fit to converse with his Horses, Dogs, and his Herds.

Mr. Pin. I have business, Sir, and must mind it; your business is pleasure, therefore you and I must go different ways.

Hor. VVell, you may go on, but this pretty young Gentleman—

Mr. Pin. The Lady—

Mr. Pin. And the Maid—

Hor.

Mrs. Pin. Lord, what a power of brave Signs are here? stay—the Bull's-head, the Rams-head, and the Stags-head, Dear

Mr. Pin. Nay, if every Husbands proper sign here were visible, they wou'd be all alike.

Mrs. Pin. What d'ye mean by that, Bud?

Mr. Pin. 'Tis no matter—no matter, Bud.

Mrs. Pin. Pray tell me; nay, I will know.

Mr. Pin. They wou'd be all Bulls, Stags, and Rams-heads.

[Exeunt Mr. Pinchwife, Mrs. Pinchwife.

Re-enter Sparkish, Harcourt, Alitheia, Lucy.

at t'other door.

Spar. Come, dear Madam, for my sake you shall be reconciled to him.

Alith. For your sake I hate him.

Har. That's something too cruel, Madam, to hate me, for his sake.

Spar. Ay indeed, Madam, too, too cruel to me, to hate my Friend for my sake.

Alith. I hate him because he is your Enemy; and you ought to hate him too, for making love to me, if you love me.

Spar. That's a good one, I hate a Man for loving you; if he did love you, 'tis but what he can't help, and 'tis your fault not his, if he admires you: I hate a Man for being of my opinion, I'll ne'er do't, by the World.

Alith. Is it for your honour or mine, to suffer a Man to make love to me, who-am to marry you to Morrow?

Spar. Is it for your honour or mine, to have me jealous? That he makes love to you, is a sign you are handsome; and that I am not jealous, is a sign you are virtuous, that I think is for your honour.

Alith. But 'tis your honour too, I am concerned for.

Har. But why, dearest Madam, will you be more concern'd for his honour, than he is himself; let his honour alone for my sake, and his, he, he, has no honour—

Spar. How's that?

Har. But what, my dear Friend can guard himself.

Spar. O ho—that's right again.

Har. Your care of his honour argues his neglect of it, which is no honour to my dear Friend here; therefore once more, let his honour go which way it will, dear Madam.

Spar. Ay, ay, were it for my honour to marry a Woman, whose virtue I suspected, and cou'd not trust her in a Friends hands?

Alith. Are you not afraid to lose me?

Har. He afraid to lose you, Madam? No, no—you may see how the most estimable, and most glorious Creature in the World, is valued by him; will you not see it?

Spar. Right, honest Frank, I have that noble value for her, that I cannot be jealous of her.

Alith. You Mistake him, he means you care not for me, nor who has me.

Spar.

Spar. Lord, Madam, I see you are jealous; will you wrest a poor Mans meaning from his words?

Alib. You astonish me, Sir, with your want of jealousy.

Spar. And you make me giddy, Madam, with your jealousy and fears, and virtue, and honour; gad, I see virtue makes a Woman as troublesome, as a little reading, or learning.

Alib. Monstrous!

Lucy. [Well to see what easie Husbands these Women of Quality can meet with, a poor Chamber-maid can never have such Lady-like luck; besides he's thrown away upon her, she'll make no use of her fortune, her blessing, none to a Gentleman, for a pure Cuckold, for it requires good breeding to be a Cuckold.]

Alib. I tell you then plainly, he pursues me to marry me.

Spar. Pshaw—

Har. Come, Madam, you see you strive in vain to make him jealous of me; my dear Friend is the kindest Creature in the World to me.

Spar. Poor fellow.

Har. But his kindness only is not enough for me, without your favour; your good opinion, dear Madam, 'tis that must perfect my happiness; good Gentleman he believes all I say, wou'd you wou'd do so, jealous of me! I wou'd not wrong him nor you for the World.

Spar. Look you there; hear him, hear him, and do not walk away so.

Har. I love you, Madam, so—

Spar. How's that! Nay—now you begin to go too far indeed.

Har. So much I confess, I say I love you, that I wou'd not have you miserable, and cast your self away upon so unworthy, and inconsiderable a thing, as what you see here.

Spar. No faith, I believe thou wou'd'st not, now his meaning is plain:

but I knew before thou wou'd'st not wrong me nor her.

Har. No, no, Heavens forbid, the glory of her Sex shou'd fall so low as into the embraces of such a contemptible Wretch, the least of Mankind—my dear Friend here—I injure him.

Alib. Very well.

Spar. No, no, dear Friend, I knew it. Madam, you see he will rather wrong himself than me, in giving himself such names.

Alib. Do not you understand him yet?

Spar. Yes, how modestly he speaks of himself, poor Fellow.

Alib. Methinks he speaks impudently of your self, since—before your self too; inso much that I can no longer suffer his scurrilous abusive-ness to you, no more than his love to me.

Spar. Nay, nay, Madam, pray stay, his love to you; Lord, Madam, has he not spoke yet plain enough?

Alib. Yes indeed, I shou'd think so.

Spar. VVell then, by the World a Man can't speak civilly to a VVo-man now, but presently she says, he makes love to her: Nay, Madam,

you

Hor. Shall stay with us, for I suppose their business is the same with ours, pleasure.

Mr. Pin. 'Sdeath he knows her, she carries it so filly, yet if he does not, I shou'd be more filly to discover it first. [Aside.]

Alib. Pray, let us go, Sir.

Mr. Pin. Come, come—

Hor. Had you not rather stay with us? [To Mrs. Pinchwife.]

Prethee Pinchwife, who is this pretty young Gentleman?

Mr. Pin. One to whom I'm a Guardian.

[I wish I cou'd keep her out of your hands—] [Aside.]

Hor. VWho is he? I never saw any thing so pretty in all my life.

Mr. Pin. Please do not look upon him so much, he's a poor bashful youth, you'll put him out of countenance. Come away Brother.

Hor. O your Brother!

Mr. Pin. Yes, my VVifes Brother; come, come, she'll stay supper for us.

Hor. I thought so, for he is very like her I saw you at the Play with, whom I told you, I was in love with.

Mr. Pin. O Jeminy! is that he that was in love with me, I am glad you vow, for he's a curious fine Gentleman, and I love him already too. [Aside.] Is this he bud?

Mr. Pin. Come away, come away. [To his Wife.]

Hor. VVhy, what haste are you in? why won't you let me talk with him?

Mr. Pin. Because you'll debauch him, he's yet young and innocent, and I wou'd not have him debauch'd for any thing in the VVorld. How she gazes on him! the Devil—

Hor. Heavens, Divilant, look you here, this is the likeness of that Downy he told us of, his VVife, did you ever see a lovelier Creature? the Rogue has reason to be jealous of his VVife, since she is like him, for she wou'd make all that see her, in love with her.

Hor. And as I remember now, she is as like him here as can be.

Dor. She is indeed very pretty, if she be like him.

Hor. very pretty, a very pretty commendation—she is a glorious Creature, beautiful beyond all things I ever beheld.

Mr. Pin. So, so.

Hor. More beautiful than a Poets first Mistress of Imagination.

Mr. Pin. Or another Mans last Mistress of flesh and blood.

Mr. Pin. Nay, now you jeer, Sir; pray don't jeer me.

Mr. Pin. Come, come. [By heavens, she'll discover her self.] [Aside.]

Hor. I speak of your Sister, Sir.

Mr. Pin. Ay, but saying she was handsome, if like him, made him blush.

Hor. Methinks he is so handsome, he shou'd not be a Man.

Mr. Pin. O there 'tis out, he has discovered her, I am not able to suffer any longer.

[Come, come away, I say.] [To his Wife.]

Hor. Nay, by your leave, Sir, he shall not go yet.

Harcourt, Dorilant, let us torment this jealous Rogee a little.

[To them.]

Hor. { How?

Dor. { How?

Hor. I'll shew you.

Mr. Pin. Come pray let him go; I cannot stay fooling any longer; I tell you his Sister stays supper for us.

Hor. Do's she, come then we'll all go sup with her and thee.

Mr. Pin. No, now I think on't, having staid so long for us, I warrant she's gone to bed.

[I wish she and I were well out of their hands.] [Aside.]

Come, I must rise early to-morrow, come.

Hor. Well then, if she be gone to bed, I wish her and you a good night. But pray, young Gentleman, present my humble service to her.

Mrs. Pin. Thank you heartily, Sir, I was in love with her.

Mr. Pin. O death, she will discover herself yet in spite of me.

[Aside.]

He is something more civil to you, for your kindness to his Sister, than I am, it seems.

Hor. Tell her, dear sweet little Gentleman, for all your brother there, that you have reviv'd the love I had for her at first sight in the Play-house.

Mr. Pin. But did you love her indeed, and indeed?

Mr. Pin. So I do. [Aside.]

Away, I say.

Hor. Nay stay; yes indeed, and indeed, pray do you tell her so, and give her this kiss from me.

Mr. Pin. O Heavens! what do I suffer now 'tis too plain he knows her, and yet.

Hor. And this, and this. [Kiss her again.]

Mrs. Pin. What do you kiss me for, I am no Woman.

Mr. Pin. So—there 'tis out. [Aside.]

Come, I cannot, nor will stay any longer.

Hor. Nay, they shall send your Lady a kist too; here Harcourt, Dorilant, will you not?

Mr. Pin. How, do I suffer this? was I not accusing another just now, for this rascally patience, in permitting his Wife to be kiss'd before his face? ten thousand Hellens gnaw away their lips. [Aside.]

Come, come.

Hor. Good night dear little Gentleman, Madam, good night; farewell Pinwife.

[Did not I tell you I would raise his jealous gall?

[Apart to Harcourt, and Dorilant.

[Exit Horner, Harcourt, and Dorilant.

Mr. Pin.

Mr. Pin. So, they are gone at last; stay, let me see first if the Coach be at this door.

Hor. What not gone yet? will you be sure to do as I desired you, sweet Sir?

Mrs. Pin. Sweet Sir, but what will you give me then?

Hor. Anything; come away into the next.

Alib. Hold, hold, — what d'ye do?

Lucy. Stay, stay, hold —

Hor. Hold Madam; hold, let him present him, he'll come presently; nay, I will never let you go, till you answer my question.

Lucy. For God's sake, Sir, I must follow 'em.

Der. No, I have something to present you.

Pinchwife returns.

Mr. Pin. Where? — how? — what's become of? gone — whither?

Lucy. He's only gone with the Gentleman, who will give him something, and please your Worship.

Mr. Pin. Something — give him something with a Fox — where are they?

Alib. In the next walk only, Brother.

Mr. Pin. Only, only; where, where?

Hor. What's the matter with him? why so much concern'd? but dearest Madam —

Alib. Pray let me go, Sir, I have said, and suffer'd enough already.

Hor. Then you will not look upon, nor pity my sufferings?

Alib. To look upon 'em, which I cannot help 'em, were it pity, not pity, therefore I will never see you more.

Hor. Let me then, Madam, have my privilege of a banished Lover, complaining or railing, and giving you but a farewell reason; why, if you cannot condescend to marry me, you shou'd not take that wretch my Rival.

Alib. He only, not you, since my honour is engag'd so far to him, can give me a reason, why I shou'd not marry him; but if he be true, and what I think him to me, I must be so to him; your Servant, Sir.

Hor. Have Women only constancy when 'tis a vice, and like fortune only true to fools?

Der. Thou sha't not stir thou robust Creature, you see I can deal with you, therefore you shou'd stay the rather, and be kind.

Alib. But into other walk, Brother.

Lucy. [To Lucy, who struggles to get from him.]

Mr. Pin. Gone, gone, not to be found; quite gone, ten thousand plagues go with 'em; which way went they?

Alib. But into other walk, Brother.

Enter Pinchwife. Their business will be done presently sure, can't please your Worship, it can't be long in doing I'm sure on't.

Exit Pinchwife. Are they not there?

Mr. Pin. No, you know where they are, you infamous Wretch, Eternal shame of your Family, which you do not dishonour enough your self, you think, but you must help her to do it too, thou legion of Snares.

Alib. Good Brother,

Mr. Pin. Damn'd, damn'd Sister and Alib. Look you here, she's coming.

Enter Mistress Pinchwife, in Orange and shred fruits, running with her hand under her arm; full of Oranges and shred fruits.

Enter Horner following.

Mr. Pin. O dear Bud, look you here, what I have got off.

Mr. Pin. And what I have got here too, Alib. rubbing his forehead. which you can't see.

Mr. Pin. The fine Gentleman has given me better things yet.

Mr. Pin. Ha! he's he's? [Out of breath and colour'd]

Enter Horner following.

Her. I have only given your little Brother an Orange, Sir. Alib.

Mr. Pin. Thank you, Sir. Alib. rubbing his forehead. Enter Horner.

You have only squeezed my Orange, I suppose, and given it me again;

yet I must have a City-patience.

Come, come away— Alib. rubbing his forehead. Enter Mr. Pin.

Mr. Pin. Say, till I have put up my fine things, Bud.

Enter Sir Jasper Fidget.

Sir Jasp. O Master, come, come, the Ladies stay for you, your Mistress, my Wife, wonders you make not more haste to her.

Mr. Pin. I have staid this half hour for you here, and 'tis your fault I am not near with your Wife.

Sir Jasp. But pray, don't let her know so much, the truth on't is,

I was advancing a certain Project to his Majesty, about you.

Mr. Pin. No, let's go, and hear it at your house. Good night sweet little Gentleman; one kiss more, you'll remember me now I hope.

Exit Mr. Pin.

Mr. Pin. What, Sir Jasper, will you separate Friends? he promised to sup with us, and if you take him to your house, you'll be in danger of our company too.

Sir Jasp. Alas Gentlemen my house is not fit for you, there are none but civil Women there, which are not for your turn; he you know can bear with the society of civil Women, now, ha, ha, ha, besides he's one of my Family, he's a heh, heh, heh.

Mr. Pin. What is he?

Sir Jasp. Faith, my Eunuch, since you'll have it, heh, he, he.

Exit Sir Jasper Fidget, and Horner.

Mr. Pin. I rather wish thou wert his, or my Cuckold: Horner, what a good Cuckold is lost there, for want of a Man to make him one; thee

and

and I cannot have Horners privilege, who can make use of it.

Har. Ay, to poor Horners, 'tis like coming to an estate at threescore, when a Man can't be the better for't.

Mr. Pin. Come.

Mrs. Pin. Presently Bud.

Dev. Come let us go too: Madam your Servant.
Good night Strapper.—

[Ex. Alith.

[Ex. Lucy.

Har. Madam though you will not let me have a good day, or night, I wish you one; but dare not name the other half of my wish.

Alith. Good night, Sir, for ever.

Mrs. Pin. I don't know where to put this here, dear Bud, you shall eat it; nay, you shall have part of the fine Gentlemans good things, or treat, as you call it, when we come home.

Mr. Pin. Indeed I deserve it, since I furnish'd the best part of it.

[Strikes away the Orange.

The Gallant treats, presents, and gives the Ball;

But 'tis the absent Cuckold, pays for all.

ACT 4. SCENE I.

In Pinchwife's House in the Morning.

Lucy, Alitha dress'd in new Cloaths.

Lucy. WELL—Madam, now have I dress'd you, and set you ous with so many ornaments, and spent upon you ounces of essence, and pulvisie; and all this for no other purpose, but as People adore, and perfume a Corps, for a stinking second-hand grave, such or as bad I think Master Sparkish's bed.

Alith. Hold your peace.

Lucy. Nay, Madam, I will ask you the reason, why you wou'd banish poor Master Harcourt for ever from your sight? how cou'd you be so hard-hearted?

Alith. 'Twas because I was not hard-hearted.

Lucy. No, no; 'twas stark love and kindness, I warrant.

Alith. It was so; I wou'd see him no more, because I love him.

Lucy. Hey-day, a very pretty reason.

Alith. You do not understand me.

Lucy. I wish you may your self.

Alith. I was engag'd to marry, you see, another man, whom my justice will not suffer me to deceive, or injure.

Lucy. Can there be a greater cheat, or wrong done to a Man, than to give him your person, without your heart; I shou'd make a conscieence of it.

Alith. I'll retrieve it for him after I am married a while.

Lucy.

Lucy. The Woman that marries to love better, will be as much mistaken, as the Wencher that marries to live better. No, Madam, marrying to increase love, is like gaming to become rich; alas you only lose what little stock you had before.

Alib. I find by your Rhetorick you have been brib'd to betray me.

Lucy. Only by his merit, that has brib'd your heart you see against your word, and rigid honour; but what a Divil is this honour? 'tis sure a disease in the head, like the Megrin, or Falling-sickness, that alwayes hurries People away to do themselves mischief; Men lose their lives by it: Women what's dearer to 'em, their love, the life of life.

Alib. Come, pray talk you no more of honour, nor Master Harcourt; I wish the other wou'd come, to secure my fidelity to him, and his right in me.

Lucy. You will marry him then?

Alib. Certainly, I have given him already my word, and will my hand too, to make it good when he comes.

Lucy. Well, I wish I may never stick pin more, if he be not an errant Natural, to t'other fine Gentleman.

Alib. I own he wants the wit of Harcourt, which I will dispence withall, for another want he has, which is want of Jealousie, which men of wit seldom want.

Lucy. Lord, Madam, what shou'd you do with a fool to your Husband, you intend to be honest, don't you? then that husbandly virtue, credulity, is thrown away upon you.

Alib. He only that could suspect my virtue, shou'd have cause to do it; 'tis Sparkish's confidence in my truth, that obliges me to be so faithful to him.

Lucy. You are not sure his opinion may last.

Alib. I am satisfied, 'tis impossible for him to be jealous, after the proofs I have had of him: Jealousie in a Husband, Heaven defend me from it, it begets a thousand plagues to a poor Woman, the loss of her honour, her quiet, and her—

Lucy. And her pleasure.

Alib. What d'ye mean, Impertinent?

Lucy. Liberty is a great pleasure, Madam.

Alib. I say loss of her honour, her quiet, nay her life sometimes; and what's as bad almost, the loss of this Town, that is, she is sent into the Country, which is the last ill usage of a Husband to a Wife, I think.

Lucy. O do's the wind lye there?

Then of necessity, Madam you, think a man must carry his Wife into the Country, if he be wise; the Country is as terrible I find to our young English Ladies, as a Monastery to those abroad; and on my Virginity, I think they wou'd rather marry a London Goaler, than a high Sheriff of a County, since neither can stir from his employment: formerly Women of wit married Fools, for a great Estate, a fine seat, or the like; but now 'tis for a pretty seat only in Lincoln's Inn-fields, St. James's-fields, or the Pal-mall.

Exit

Enter to them Sparkish, and Harcourt dress'd like a Parson.

Spar. Madam, your humble Servant, a happy day to you, and to us all.

Har. Amen. —

Alib. Who have we here?

Spar. My Chaplain faith — O Madam, poor Harcourt remembers his humble service to you; and in obedience to your last commands, refrains coming into your sight.

Alib. Is not that he?

Spar. No, I ye no; but to shew that he ne're intended to hinder our Match has sent his Brother here to joyn our hands: when I get me a Wife, I must get her a Chaplain, according to the Custom; this is his Brother, and my Chaplain.

Alib. His Brother?

Lucy. And your Chaplain, to preach in your Pulpit then —

[Aside.

Alib. His Brother!

Spar. Nay, I knew you wou'd not believe it; I told you, Sir, she wou'd take you for your Brother Frank.

Alib. Believe it!

Lucy. His Brother! hah, ha, he, he has a trick left still it seems —

[Aside.

Spar. Come my dearest, pray let us go to Church before the Canonical hour is past.

Alib. For shame, you are abus'd still.

Spar. By the World 'tis strange now you are so incredulous.

Alib. 'Tis strange you are so credulous.

Spar. Dearest of my life, hear me, I tell you this is Ned Harcourt of Cambridge, by the world, you see he has a sneaking Colledg look; 'tis true he's something like his Brother Frank, and they differ from each other no more than in their age, for they were Twins.

Lucy. Hah, ha, he

Alib. Your Servant, Sir, I cannot be so deceiv'd, though you are; but come let's hear, how do you know what you affirm so confidently?

Spar. Why, I'll tell you all; Frank Harcourt coming to me this morning, to wish me joy, and present his service to you: I ask'd him, if he cou'd help me to a Parson; whereupon he told me, he had a Brother in Town who was in Orders, and he went straight away, and sent him, you see there, to me.

Alib. Yes, Frank goes, and puts on a black-coat, then tells you, he is Ned, that's all you have for't.

Spar. Pshaw, Pshaw, I tell you by the same token, the Midwife put her Garter about Frank's neck, to know 'em asunder, they were so like.

Alib. Frank tells you this too.

Spar. Ay, and Ned, there too; nay, they are both in a Story.

Alib. So, so, very foolish.

Spar. Lord, if you won't believe one, you had best trye him by your Chamber-

Chamber-maid there, for Chamber-maids must needs know Chaplains from other Men, they are so us'd to 'em.

Lucy. Let's see; nay, I'll be sworn he has the Canonical smirk, and the filthy, clammy palm of a Chaplain.

Alib. Well, most reverend Doctor, pray let us make an end of this fooling.

Har. With all my soul, Divine, Heavenly Creature, when you please.

Alib. He speaks like a Chaplain indeed.

Spar. Why, was there not, soul, Divine, Heavenly, in what he said?

Alib. Once more, most impertinent black-coat, cease your persecution, and let us have a Conclusion of this ridiculous love.

Har. I had forgot, I must intem my Stile to my Coat, or I wear it in vain.

Alib. I have no more patience left, let us make once an end of this troublesome Love, I say.

Har. So be it, Seraphick Lady, when your honour shall think it meet, and convenient so to do.

Spar. Gad I'm sure none but a Chaplain cou'd speak so, I think.

Alib. Let me tell you Sir, this dull trick will not serve your turn, though you delay our marriage, you shall not hinder it.

Har. Far be it from me, Munificent Patroness, to delay your Marriage, I desire nothing more than to marry you presently, which I might do, if you your self wou'd; for my Noble, Good-natur'd, and thrice Generous Patron here wou'd not hinder it.

Spar. No, poor man, not I faith.

Har. And now, Madam, let me tell you plainly, no body else shall marry you, by Heavens, I'll dye first, for I'm sure I shou'd die after it.

Lucy. How his love has made him forget his function, as I have seen it in real Parsons.

Alib. That was spoken like a Chaplain too, now you understand him, I hope.

Spar. Poor man, he takes it hainously to be refus'd; I can't blame him, 'tis putting an indignity upon him not to be suffer'd, but you'll pardon me Madam, it shan't be, he shall marry us, come away, pray Madam.

Lucy. Hah, ha, he, more ado! 'tis late.

Alib. Invincible stupidity, I tell you he wou'd marry me, as your Rival, not as your Chaplain.

Spar. Come, come Madam,

[Pulling her away.]

Lucy. I pray Madam, do not refuse this Reverend Divine, the honour and satisfaction of marrying you; for I dare say, he has set his heart upon't, good Doctor.

Alib. What can you hope, or design by this?

Har. I cou'd answer her, a reprieve for a day only, often revokes a hasty doom? at worst, if she will not take mercy on me, and let me marry her, I have at least the Lovers second pleasure, hindring my Rivals enjoyment, though but for a time.

Spar.

Spur. Come Madam, 'tis e'en twelve a clock, and my Mother charg'd me never to be married out of the Canonical hours: come, come, Lord here's such a deal of modesty, I warrant the first day.

Lucy. Yes, an't please your Worship, married women shew all their Modesty the first day, because married men shew all their love the first day.

Exeunt Sparkish, Alithea, Harcourt, and Lucy.

The Scene changes to a Bed-chamber, where appear Pinchwife, and Mrs. Pinchwife.

Mr. Pinch. Come tell me, I say.

Mrs. Pinch. Lord, han't I told it an hundred times over.

Mr. Pinch. I wou'd try, if in the repetition of the ungrateful tale, I cou'd find her altering it in the least circumstance, for if her story be false, she is so too. [Aside.] Come, how was't Baggage?

Mrs. Pinch. Lord, what pleasure you take to hear it sure!

Mr. Pinch. No, you take more in telling it I find, but speak, how was't?

Mrs. Pinch. He carried me up into the house, next to the Exchange.

Mr. Pin. So, and you two were only in the room.

Mrs. Pin. Yes, for he sent away a youth that was there, for some dried fruit, and China Oranges.

Mr. Pin. Did he so? Damn him for it—and for—

Mrs. Pin. But presently came up the Gentlewoman of the house.

Mr. Pin. O 'twas well she did, but what did he do whilest the fruit came?

Mrs. Pin. He kiss'd me an hundred times, and told me he fancied he kiss'd my fine Sister, meaning me you know, whom he said he lov'd with all his Soul, and bid me be sure to tell her so, and to desire her to be at her window, by eleven of the clock this morning, and he wou'd walk under it at that time.

Mr. Pin. And he was as good as his word, very punctual, a pox reward him for't.

Mrs. Pin. Well, and he said if you were not within, he wou'd come up to her, meaning me you know, Bud. still.

Mr. Pin. So—he knew her certainly, but for this confession, I am oblig'd to her simplicity. [Aside.] But what you stood very still, when he kiss'd you?

Mrs. Pin. Yes I warrant you, wou'd you have had me discover'd my self?

Mr. Pin. But you told me, he did some beastliness to you, as you call'd it, what was't?

Mrs. Pin. Why, he put—

Mr. Pin. What?—

Mrs. Pin. Why he put the tip of his tongue between my lips, and so muss'd me—and I said, I'd bite it.

Mr. Pin. An eternal canker seize it, for a dog.

Mrs. Pin. Nay, you need not be so angry with him neither, for to say truth, he has the sweetest breath I ever knew.

Mr. Pin. The Devil—you were satisfied with it then, and would do it again.

Mrs. Pin. Not unless he shou'd force me.

Mr. Pin. Force you, changeling! I tell you no woman can be forced.

Mrs. Pin. Yes, but she may sure, by such a one as he, for he's a proper, goodly strong man, 'tis hard, let me tell you, to resist him.

Mr. Pin. So, 'tis plain she loves him, yet she has not love enough to make her conceal it from me, but the sight of him will increase her aversion for me, and love for him; and that love instruct her how to deceive me, and satisfy him, all I doot as she is. Love, 'twas he gave women first their craft, their art of deluding; out of Natures hands they came plain, open, silly and fit for slaves, as she and Heaven intended 'em; but damp'd Love—Well—I must strangle that little Monster, whilest I can deal with him.

Go fetch Pen, Ink, and Paper out of the next room.

Mrs. Pin. Yes Bud. [Exit Mrs. Pinchwife.]

Mr. Pin. VVhy should VVomen have more invention in love than men? It can only be, because they have more desires, more soliciting passions, more lust, and more of the Devil. [Aside.]

Mistress Pinchwife returns.

Come, Minksy, sit down and write.

Mrs. Pin. Ay, dear Bud, but I can't do's very well.

Mr. Pin. I wish you could not at all.

Mrs. Pin. But what shou'd I write for?

Mr. Pin. I'll have you write a Letter to your Lover.

Mrs. Pin. O Lord, to the fine Gentleman's Letter!

Mr. Pin. Yes, to the fine Gentleman.

Mrs. Pin. Lord, you do but jeer; sure you jest.

Mr. Pin. I am not so merry, come write as I bid you.

Mrs. Pin. VVhat do you think, I am a fool?

Mr. Pin. She's afraid I would not dictate any love to him; therefore she's unwilling; but you had best begin.

Mrs. Pin. Indeed, and indeed, but I won't, for I won't.

Mr. Pin. Why not?

Mrs. Pin. Because he's in Town, you may send for him if you will.

Mr. Pin. Very well, you would have him brought to you; is it come to this? I say take the pen and write, or you'll provoke me.

Mrs. Pin. Lord, what d'ye make a fool of me for? Don't I know that Letters are never writ but from the Country to London, and from London into the Country; now he's in Town, and I am in Town too; therefore I can't write to him you know.

Mr. Pin. So, I am glad it is no worse, she is innocent enough yet.

Yes you may, when your Husband bids you write Letters to people that are in Town. [Aside.]

Mrs. Pin.

- Mr. Pin. O may I so? Then I'm satisfied.
- Mr. Pin. Come begin—Sir— [Writes.]
- Mrs. Pin. Shan't I say, Dear Sir? You know one says always something more than bare Sir.
- Mr. Pin. Write as I bid you, and will write Where with this Penknife in your Face.
- Mrs. Pin. Nay good End—Sir— [She writes.]
- Mr. Pin. Though I suffer'd last night your nauseous, loath'd Kisses and Embraces—Write.
- Mrs. Pin. Nay, why thou'd I say so? you know I told you, he had a sweet breath.
- Mr. Pin. Write—
- Mrs. Pin. Let me but put out, loath'd.
- Mr. Pin. Write I say.
- Mrs. Pin. Well then.
- Mr. Pin. Let's see what have you writ?
- Though I suffer'd last night your Kisses and Embraces— [Takes the Paper, and reads.]
Thou impudent creature, where is nauseous and loath'd?
- Mrs. Pin. I can't abide to write such filthy words.
- Mr. Pin. Once more write as I'd have you, and question it not, or I will spoil thy writing with this, I will stab out those eyes that cause my mischief. [Holds up the Penknife.]
- Mrs. Pin. O Lord, I will.
- Mr. Pin. So—so—Let's see now.
- Though I suffer'd last night your nauseous, loath'd Kisses, and embraces; Go on—Yet I would not have you presume that you shall ever repeat them—So— [She writes.]
- Mrs. Pin. I have writ it.
- Mr. Pin. On then—I then conceal'd my self from your knowledge, to avoid your insolencies— [She writes.]
- Mrs. Pin. So—
- Mr. Pin. The same reason now I am out of your hands— [She writes.]
- Mrs. Pin. So—
- Mr. Pin. Makes me own to you my unfortunate, though innocent frolick, of being in mans cloaths: [She writes.]
- Mrs. Pin. So—
- Mr. Pin. That you may for evermore cease to pursue her, who hates and detests you— [She writes on.]
- Mrs. Pin. So—h— [Sighs.]
- Mr. Pin. What do you sigh?—detests you—as much as she loves her Husband and her Honour.
- Mrs. Pin. I vow Husband he'll ne'er believe, I thou'd write such a Letter.
- Mr. Pin. What he'd expect a kinder from you? come now your name only.

Mrs. Pin. What, shall I say your most faithful, humble Servant till death?

Mr. Pin. No, tormenting Friend; her stile I find wou'd be very soft.

Come, wrap it up now, whilst I go fetch wax and a candle; and write on the back-side, for Mr. Horner.

Mrs. Pin. For Mr. Horner—So, I am glad he has told me his name; Dear Mr. Horner, but why should I send thee such a Letter, that will vex thee, and make thee angry with me;—well I will not send it—Ay but then my husband will kill me—for I see plainly, he won't let me love Mr. Horner—but what care I for my Husband—I won't so I won't send poor Mr. Horner such a Letter—but then my Husband—But oh—what if I writ at bottom, my Husband made me write it—Ay but then my Husband wou'd see't—Can one have no shift, ah, a London woman wou'd have had a hundred presently, stay—what if I shou'd write a Letter, and wrap it up like this, and write upon't too; ay but then my Husband wou'd see't—I don't know what to do—But yet y yads I'll try, so I will—for I will not send this Letter to poor Mr. Horner; come what will on't.

Dear, Sweet Mr. Horner—So—my Husband wou'd have me send you a base, rude, unmannerly Letter—but I won't—and wou'd have me forbid you loving me—but I won't—and wou'd have me say to you, I hate you poor Mr. Horner—but I won't tell a lye for him—there—for I'm sure if you and I were in the Country at cards together, so—I cou'd not help treading on your Toe under the Table, so—or rubbing knees with you, and staring in your face, till you saw me—very well—and then looking down, and blushing for an hour together—so—but I must make haste before my Husband come; and now he has taught me to write Letters: You shall have longer ones from me, who am

Dear, dear, poor dear Mr. Horner, your most Humble Friend, and Servant to command till death,

Margery Pinchwife.

Stay I must give him a hint at bottom—so—now wrap it up just like t'other—so—now write for Mr. Horner,—But oh now, what shall I do with it? for here comes my Husband.

Enter Pinchwife.

Mr. Pin. I have been detained by a Sparkish Coxcomb, who pretended a visit to me; but I fear 't was to my Wife.

What, have you done?

Mrs. Pin. Ay, ay Budy just now.

Mr. Pin. Let's see't, what d'ye tremble for; what, you wou'd not have it go?

Mrs. Pin. Here—No I must not give him that, so He opens, and reads I had been served if I had given him this.

Mr. Pin.

Mr. Pin. Come, where's the Wax and Seal?

Mrs. Pin. Lord, what shall I do now? Nay then I have it—[Aside. Snatches the Letter from him, changes it for the other, seals it, and delivers it to him.]
Pray let me see't, Lord you think me so errand a fool, I cannot seal a Letter, I will do't for I will.

Mr. Pin. Nay, I believe you will learn that and other things too; which I would not have you.

Mrs. Pin. So, han't I done it curiously?
I think I have, there's my Letter going to Mr. Horner; since he'll needs have me send Letters to Folks.

Mr. Pin. 'Tis very well, but I warrant, you would not have it go now?

Mrs. Pin. Yes indeed, but I would, Bud, now.

Mr. Pin. Well you are a good Girl then, come let me lock you up in your chamber, till I come back; and be sure you come not within three strides of the window, when I am gone; for I have a spy in the street.

At least 'tis fit she think so, if we do not cheat Pinchwife like women, they'll cheat us; and fraud may be justly used with secret enemies, of which a Wife is the most dangerous; and he that has a handsome one to keep, and a Frontier Town, must provide against treachery, rather than open Force—Now I have secured all within, I'll deal with the Foe without with false intelligence.

[Exit Mrs. Pinchwife.]

The Scene changes to Horner's Lodging.

Quack and Horner.

Quack. Well Sir, how fadges the new design; have you not the luck of all your Brother Projectors, to deceive only your self at last?

Hor. No, good Damine Doctor, I deceive you it seems, and others too; for the grave Matrons, and old ridgid Husbands think me as unfit for love, as they are; but their Wives, Sisters and Daughters, know some of 'em better things already.

Quack. Already!

Hor. Already, I say; last night I was drunk with half a dozen of your civil persons, as you call 'em, and people of Honour, and so was made free of their society, and dressing rooms for ever hereafter; and am already come to the privileges of sleeping upon their Pallacy, warming Smocks, tying Shoes and Garters, and the like Doctor, already Doctor.

Quack. You have made use of your time, Sir.

Hor. I tell thee, I am now no more interruption to 'em, when they sing, or talk bawdy, than a little Squab French Page, who speaks no English.

Quack.

Quack. But do civil persons, and women of Honour drink and sing bawdy Songs?

Hor. O amongst Friends, amongst Friends; for your Bigots in Honour are just like those in Religion: they fear the eye of the world, more than the eye of Heaven, and think there is no virtue, but railing at vice; and no sin, but giving scandal: They rail at a poor, little, Knap Player; and keep themselves some young, modest Pulpit Comedian to be privy to their sins in their Closets, not to tell 'em of them in their Chappels.

Quack. Nay, the truth on 'is, Priests amongst the women now, have quite got the better of us Lay Confessors, Physicians.

Hor. And they are rather their Patients, but—

Enter my Lady Fidget, looking about her.

Now we talk of women of Honour, here comes one, step behind the Screen there, and but observe; if I have not particular privileges, with the women of reputation already, Doctor, already.

La. Fid. Well Horner, am not I a woman of Honour? you see I'm as good as my word.

Hor. And you shall see Madam, I'll not be behind hand with you in honour; and I'll be as good as my word too, if you please but to withdraw into the next room.

La. Fid. But first, my dear Sir, you must promise to have a care of my dear Honour.

Hor. If you talk a word more of your Honour, you'll make me incapable to wrong it; to talk of Honour in the mysteries of Love, is like talking of Heaven, or the Deity in an operation of VVitchcraft, just when you are employing the Devil, it makes the charm impotent.

La. Fid. Nay, fie, let us not be smooty; but you talk of mysteries, and bewitching to me, I don't understand you.

Hor. I tell you Madam, the word money in a Mistress's mouth, at such a nick of time, is not a more disheartning sound to a younger Brother, than that of Honour to an eager Lover like my self.

La. Fid. But you can't blame a Lady of my reputation to be chary.

Hor. Chary—I have been chary of it already, by the report I have caus'd of my self.

La. Fid. Ay, but if you shou'd ever let other women know that dear secret, it would come out; nay, you must have a great care of your conduct; for my acquaintance are so censorious, (oh 'tis a wicked censorious world, Mr. Horner.) I say, are so censorious, and detracting, that perhaps they'll talk to the prejudice of my Honour, though you shou'd not let them know the dear secret.

Hor. Nays, Madam, rather than they shall prejudice your Honour, I'll prejudice theirs; and to serve you, I'll lye with 'em all, make the Secres their own, and then they'll keep it: I am a Machiavell in love, Madam.

La. Fid. O, no Sir, not that way.

Hor. Nay, the Devil take me, if censorious women are to be silenc'd any other way.

La. Fid.

La. Fid. A secret is better kept I hope, by a single person than a multitude; therefore pray do not trust any body else with it, dear, dear Mr. Horner.

Enter Sir Jasper Fidget. [Embracing him.]

Sir Jas. How now!

La. Fid. O my Husband—prevented—and what's almost as bad, found with my arms about another man—that will appear too much—what shall I say?

Sir Jasper come hither, I am trying if Mr. Horner were ticklish, and he's as ticklish as can be, I love to torment the confounded Toad; let you and I tickle him.

Sir Jas. No, your Ladyship will tickle him better without me, I suppose; but is this your buying China, I thought you had been at the China House?

Hor. China-House, that's my Cue, I must take it. [Aside.]

A Pox, can't you keep your impertinent Wives at home? Some men are troubled with the Husbands, but I with the Wives; but I'd have you to know, since I cannot be your Journey-man by night, I will not be your drudge by day, to squire your wife about, and be your man of straw, or scare-crow only to Pyes and Jays; that would be nibbling at your forbidden fruit; I shall be shortly the Hackney Gentleman-Usher of the Town.

Sir Jas. Heh, heh, he, poor fellow he's in the right on't faith, to squire women about for other folks, is as ungrateful an employment, as to tell money for other folks; [Aside.] Heh, he, he, bent angry Horner.

La. Fid. No, tis I have more reason to be angry, who am left by you, to go abroad indecently alone; or, what is more indecent, to pin my self upon such ill-bred people of your acquaintance, as this is.

Sir Jas. Nay, pr'ythee what has he done?

La. Fid. Nay, he has done nothing.

Sir Jas. But what d'ye take ill, if he has done nothing?

La. Fid. Hah, hah, hah, Faith, I can't but laugh however; why d'ye think the unmannerly toad wou'd not come down to me to the Coach, I was fain to come up to fetch him, or go without him, which I was resolv'd not to do; for he knows China very well; and has himself very good, but will not let me see it, lest I should beg some; but I will find it out, and have what I came for yet.

[Exit Lady Fidget, and locks the door, followed by Horner to the door.]

Hor. Lock the door Madam—

[Apart to Lady Fidget.]

So, she has got into my chamber, and lock'd me out; oh the impertinency of woman-kind! Well, Sir Jasper, plain dealing is a Jewel; if ever you suffer your Wife to trouble me again here, she shall carry you home a pair of Horns, by my Lord Mayor she shall; though I cannot furnish you my self, you are sure, yet I'll find a way.

Sir Jasper. Hah, ha, he, at my first coming in, and finding her arms about about him, tickling him it seems, I was half jealous, but now I see my folly.

Heh, he, he, poor Horner.

Hor. Nay though you laugh now, 'twill be my turn e're long: Oh women, more impertinent, more cunning, and more mischievous than their Monkeys, and to me almost as ugly—now is the throwing my things about, and rifling all I have, but I'll get in to her the back way, and so rifle her for it—

Sir. Jas. Hah, ha, ha, poor angry Horner.

Hor. Stay here a little, I'll ferret her out to you presently, I warrant.

[Exit Horner at either door.]

Sir. Jas. Wife, my Lady Fidget, Wife, he is coming into you the back way.

{ Sir Jasper calls through the door to his Wife, she answers from within.

La. Fid. Let him come, and welcome, which way he will.

Sir. Jas. He'll catch you, and use you roughly, and be too strong for you.

La. Fid. Don't you trouble your self, let him if he can.

Quick. [Behind] This indeed I cou'd not have believ'd from him, nor any but my own eyes.

Enter Mistress Squeamish.

Squeam. Where's this Woman-hater, this Toad, this ugly, greasie, dirty Sloven?

Sir. Jas. So the women all will have him ugly, methinks he is a comely person; but his wants make his form contemptible to 'em; and 'tis e'en as my Wife said yesterday, talking of him, that a proper handsome Eunuch, was as ridiculous a thing, as a Gigantick Coward.

Squeam. Sir Jasper, your Servant, where is the odious Beast?

Sir. Jas. He's within in his Chamber, with my Wife, she's playing the wag with him.

Squeam. Is she so, and he's a clownish beast, he'll give her no quarter, he'll play the wag with her again, let me tell you; come, let's go help her—What, the door's lock'd?

Sir. Jas. Ay, my Wife lock'd it—

Squeam. Did she so, let us break it open then?

Sir. Jas. No, no, he'll do her no hurt.

Squeam. No—But is there no other way to get in to 'em, whither goes this? I will disturb 'em.

[Aside.]

[Exit Squeamish at another door.]

Enter old Lady Squeamish.

Old L. Squeam. Where is this Harlotry, this Impudent Baggage, this rambling Tomrigg? O Sir Jasper, I'm glad to see you here, did you not see my vil'd Grandchild come in hither just now?

Sir. Jas. Yes.

Old L. Squeam. Ay, but where is she then? where is she? Lord Sir Jasper I have e'en rattled my self to pieces in pursuit of her, but can you tell what she makes here, they say below, no woman lodges here.

Sir. Jas. No.

Old L.

Old L. Squeam. No—What does she here then? say if it be not a womans lodging, what makes she here? but are you sure no woman lodges here?

Sir. Jas. No, nor no man neither, this is Mr. Horners Lodging.

Old L. Squeam. Is it so are you sure?

Sir. Jas. Yes, yes.

Old L. Squeam. So then there's no hurt in't I hope, but where is he?

Sir. Jas. He's in the next room with my Wife.

Old L. Squeam. Nay if you trust him with your wife, I may with my Biddy, they say he's a merry harmless man now, e'en as harmless a man as ever came out of Italy with a good voice, and as pretty harmless company for a Lady, as a Snake without his teeth.

Sir. Jas. Ay, ay Poor man.

Enter Mrs. Squeamish.

Squeam. I can't find 'em—Oh are you here, Grandmother, I follow'd you must know my Lady Fidget hither, 'tis the prettyest lodging, and I have been staring on the prettyest Pictures.

Enter Lady Fidget with a piece of China in her hand, and Horner following.

La. Fid. And I have been toying and moyling, for the pretti'st piece of China, my Dear.

Hor. Nay she has been too hard for me do what I con'd.

Squeam. Oh Lord I'll have some China too, good Mr. Horner, don't think to give other people China, and me none, come in with me too.

Hor. Upon my honour I have none left now.

Squeam. Nay, nay I have known you deny your China before now, but you shan't put me off so, come—

Hor. This Lady had the last there.

La. Fid. Yes indeed, Madam, so my certain knowledge he has no more left.

Squeam. O but it may be he may have some you could not find.

La. Fid. What d'ye think if he had had any left, I would not have had it too, for we women of quality never think we have China enough.

Hor. Do not take it ill, I cannot make China for you all, but I will have a Rol-waggon for you too, another time.

Squeam. Thank you dear Toad. [To Horn. aside.

La. Fid. What do you mean by that promise?

Hor. Alas she has an innocent, literal understanding. [Apert to La. dy Fidget.

Old L. Squeam. Poor Mr. Horner, he has enough to do to please you all, I see.

Hor. Ay Madam, you see how they use me.

Old L. Squeam. Poor Gentleman I pity you.

Hor. I thank you Madam, I could never find pity, but from such reverend Ladies as you are, the young ones will never spare a man.

Squeam. Come, come, Beast, and go dine with us, for we shall want a man at Hombre after dinner.

Hor. That's all their use of me Madam you see.

Squeam. Come Sloven, I'll lead you to be sure of you.

[Pulls him by the Crown.]

Old L. Squeam. Alas poor man how she tugs him, kifs, kifs her, thats the way to make such nice women quiet.

Hor. No Madam, that Remedy is worse than the torment, they know I dare suffer any thing rather than do it.

Old L. Squeam. Prythee kifs her, and I'll give you her Picture in litle, that you admir'd so last night, prythee do.

Hor. Well nothing but that could bribe me, I love a woman only in Effigie, and good painting as much as I hate them—I'll do't, for I cou'd adore the Devil well painted.

[Kisses Mrs Squeam.]

Squeam. Foh, you filthy Toad, nay now I've done jesting.

Old L. Squeam. Ha, ha, ha, I told you so.

Squeam. Foh, a kifs of his—

Sir. Jas. Has no more hurt in't, than one of my Spaniels.

Squeam. Nor no more good neither.

Quack. I will now believe any thing he tells me.

[Behind.]

Enter Mr. Pinchwife.

La. Fid. O Lord here's a man, Sir Jasper, my Mask, my Mask, I would not be seen here for the world.

Sir. Jas. What not when I am with you.

La. Fid. No, no my honour——let's be gone.

Squeam. Oh Grandmother, let us be gone, make haste, make haste, I know not how he may censure us.

La. Fid. Be found in the lodging of any thing like a man, away.

*[Exeunt Sir. Jas. La. Fid. Old. La.
Squeam, Mrs. Squeamish.]*

Quack. What's here, another Cuckold—he looks like one, and none else sure have any business with him.

[Behind.]

Hor. Well, what brings my dear friend hither?

Mr. Pinch. Your impertinency.

Hor. My impertinency——why you Gentlemen that have got handsome Wives, think you have a privilege of saying any thing to your friends, and are as brutish, as if you were our Creditors.

Mr. Pinch. No Sir, I'll ne're trust you any way.

Hor. But why not, dear Jack, why diffide in me, thou know'st so well?

Mr. Pin. Because I do know you so well.

Hor. Hant I been always thy friend, honest Jack, alwayes ready to serve thee, in love, or battel, before thou wert married, and am so still?

Mr. Pin. I believe so you wou'd be my second now indeed.

Hor. Well then dear Jack, why so unkind, so grum, so strange to me, come prythee kifs me dear Rogue, gad I was always I say, and am still as much thy Servant as——

Mr. Pin. As I am yours Sir. What you wou'd send a kifs to my Wife, is that it?

Hor. So there 'tis——a man can't shew his friendship to a married

The Country-Wife.

51

ried man, but presently he talks of his wife to you; prythee let thy Wife alone, and let thee and I be all one, as we were wont, what thou art as shy of my kindness, as a Lombard-street Alderman of a Courtiers civility at Lockets.

Mr. Pin. But you are over kind to me, as kind, as if I were your Cuckold already, yet I must confess you ought to be kind and civil to me, since I am so kind, so civil to you, as to bring you this, look you there Sir.

[Delivers him a Letter.]

Hor. VVhat is't?

Mr. Pinch. Only a Love Letter Sir.

Hor. From whom—how, this is from your VVife—hum—and hum—[Reads.]

Mr. Pin. Even from my Wife Sir, am I not wondrous kind and civil to you, now too?

But you'll not think her so.

[Aside.]

Hor. Ha, is this a trick of his or hers?

[Aside.]

Mr. Pin. The Gentleman's surpriz'd I find, what you expected a kinder Letter?

Hor. No faith not I, how cou'd I?

Mr. Pin. Yes, yes, I'm sure you did; a man so well made as you are must needs be disappointed, if the women declare not their passion at first sight or opportunity.

Hor. But what should this mean? stay, the Postscript.

Be sure you love me whatsoever my husband says to the contrary, and let him not see this, lest he should come home, and pinch me, or kill my Squirrel.

[Reads aside.]

It seems he knows not what the Letter contains

[Aside.]

Mr. Pin. Come ne're wonder at it so much.

Hor. Faith I can't help it.

Mr. Pin. Now I think I have deserv'd your infinite friendship, and kindness, and have shewed my self sufficiently an obliging kind friend and husband, am I not so, to bring a Letter from my Wife to her Gallant?

Hor. Ay, the Devil take me, art thou, the most obliging, kind friend and husband in the world, ha, ha.

Mr. Pin. Well you may be merry Sir, but in short I must tell you Sir, my honour will suffer no jesting.

Hor. What do'st thou mean?

Mr. Pin. Does the Letter want a Comment? then know Sir, though I have been so civil a husband as to bring you a Letter from my Wife, to let you kiss and court her to my face, I will not be a Cuckold Sir, I will not.

Hor. Thou art mad with jealousy, I never saw thy Wife in my life, but at the Play yesterday, and I know not if it were she or no, I court her, kiss her!

Mr. Pin. I will not be a Cuckold I say, there will be danger in making me a Cuckold.

Hor. Why, wert thou not well cur'd of thy last clap?

Mr. Pin. I wear a Sword.

Hor. It should be taken from thee, lest thou should'st do thy self a mischief with it, thou art mad, Man.

Mr. Pin. As mad as I am, and as merry as you are, I must have more reason from you e're we part, I say again, though you kiss'd, and courted last night my Wife in man's clothes, as she confesses, in her Letter.

Hor. Ha——— [Aside.]

Mr. Pin. Both she and I say you must not design it again, for you have mistaken your woman, as you have done your man.

Hor. Oh——I understand something now——— [Aside.]

Was that thy Wife? why would'st thou not tell me 'twas she? faith my freedom with her was your fault, not mine.

Mr. Pin. Faith so 'twas——— [Aside.]

Hor. Fye, I'de never do't to a woman before her husbands face, sure.

Mr. Pin. But I had rather you should do't to my wife before my face, than behind my back, and that you shall never do.

Hor. No———you will hinder me.

Mr. Pin. If I would not hinder you, you see by her Letter she wou'd.

Hor. Well, I must e'en acquiesce then, and be contented with what she writes.

Mr. Pin. I'll assure you 'twas voluntarily writ, I had no hand in't; you may believe me.

Hor. I do believe thee, faith.

Mr. Pin. And believe her too, for she's an innocent creature, has no dissembling in her, and so fare you well Sir.

Hor. Pray however present my humble service to her, and tell her I will obey her Letter to a tittle, and fulfill her desires, be what they will, or with what difficulty soever I do't, and you shall be no more jealous of me, I warrant her, and you——

Mr. Pin. Well then fare you well, and play with any mans honour but mine, kiss any mans wife but mine, and welcome——

[Exit Mr. Pinch.]

Hor. Ha, ha, ha, Doctor.

Quack. It seems he has not heard the report of you, or does not believe it?

Hor. Ha, ha, now Doctor what think you?

Quack. Pray let's see the Letter——hum——for———dear———love you——— [Reads the Letter.]

Hor. I wonder how she cou'd contrive it! what say'st thou to't, 'tis an Original.

Quack. So are your Cuckolds too Originals: for they are like no other common Cuckolds, and I will henceforth believe it not impossible for you to Cuckold the Grand Signior amidst his Guards of Eunuchs, that I say——

Hor. And I say for the Letter, 'tis the first Love Letter that ever was without Flames, Darts, Fages, Destinies, Lying and Dissembling in't.

Enter.

Enter Sparkish pulling in Mr. Pinchwife.

Spar. Come back, you are a pretty Brother-in-law, neither go to Church, nor to dinner with your Sister Bride.

Mr. Pin. My Sister denies her marriage, and you see is gone away from you dissatisfy'd.

Spar. Pshaw, upon a foolish scruple, that our Parson was not in lawful Orders, and did not say all the Common Prayer, but 'tis her modesty only I believe, but let women be never so modest the first day, they'll be sure to come to themselves by night, and I shall have enough of her then; in the mean time, Harry Horner, you must dine with me, I keep my wedding at my Aunts in the Piazza.

Hor. Thy wedding, what stale Maid has liv'd to despair of a husband, or what young one of a Gallant?

Spar. O your Servant Sir——this Gentlemans Sister then——
No stale Maid.

Hor. I'm sorry for't.

Mr. Pin. How comes he so concern'd for her—— [Aside.]

Spar. You sorry for't, why do you know any ill by her?

Hor. No, I know none but by thee, 'tis for her sake, not yours, and another mans sake that might have hop'd, I thought——

Spar. Another man, another man, what is his Name?

Hor. Nay, since 'tis past he shall be nameless.

Poor Harcourt. I am sorry thou hast mist her—— [Aside.]

Mr. Pin. He seems to be much troubled at the match—— [Aside.]

Spar. Prythee tell me—— nay you shan't go Brother.

Mr. Pin. I must of necessity, but I'll come to you to dinner.

[Exit Pinchwife.]

Spar. But Harry, what have I a Rival in my Wife already? but without my heart, for he may be of use to me hereafter, for though my hunger is now my sawce, and I can fall on heartily without, but the time will come, when a Rival will be as good sawce for a married man to a wife, as an Orange to Veal.

Hor. O thou damn'd Rogue, thou hast set my teeth on edge with thy Orange.

Spar. Then let's to dinner, there I was with you again, come.

Hor. But who dines with thee?

Spar. My Friends and Relations, my Brother Pinchwife, you see, of your acquaintance.

Hor. And his Wife.

Spar. No gad, he'll ne'er let her come amongst us good fellows, your stingy country Coxcomb keeps his wife from his friends, as he does his little Firkin of Ale, for his own drinking, and a Gentleman can't get a smack on't, but his Servants, when his back is turn'd, broach it at their pleasures, and dust it away, ha, ha, ha, gad I am witty I think, considering I was married to day, by the world, but come——

Hor. No, I will not dine with you, unless you can fetch her too.

[Spar.]

Spar. Pshaw, what pleasure canst thou have with women now, Harry?

Hor. My eyes are not gone, I love a good prospect yet, and will not dine with you, unless she does too, go fetch her therefore, but do not tell her husband, 'tis for my sake.

Spar. Well Ple go try what I can do, in the meantime come away to my Aunts lodging, 'tis in the way to Pinchwife's.

Hor. The poor woman has call'd for aid, and stretch'd forth her hand Doctor, I cannot but help her over the Pale out of the Bryars.

[Exeunt Sparkish, Horner, Quack.]

The Scene changes to Pinchwife's house.

Mrs. Pinchwife alone leaning on her elbow.

A Table, Pen, Ink, and Paper.

Mrs. Pin. Well 'tis e'en so, I have got the London disease, they call Love, I am sick of my Husband, and for my Gallant; I have heard this distemper, call'd a Feaver, but methinks 'tis liker an Ague, for when I think of my Husband, I tremble, and am in a cold sweat, and have inclinations to vomit, but when I think of my Gallant, dear Mr. Horner, my hot fit comes, and I am all in a Feaver, indeed, and as in other Feavers, my own Chamber is tedious to me, and I would fain be remov'd to his, and then methinks I shou'd be well; ah poor Mr. Horner, well I cannot, will not stay here, therefore I'll make an end of my Letter to him, which shall be a finer Letter than my last, because I have studied it like any thing; O Sick, Sick!

{Takes the Pen and writes.}

Enter Mr. Pinchwife, who seeing her writing, steals softly behind her, and looking over her shoulder, snatches the paper from her.

Mr. Pin. What writing more Letters?

Mrs. Pin. O Lord Budd, why d'ye fright me so?

{She offers to run out: he stops her, and reads.}

Mr. Pin. How's this! nay you shall not stir Madam. Dear, Dear, dear, Mr. Horner——very well——I have taught you to write Letters to good purpose——but let's see't.

First I am to beg your pardon for my boldness in writing to you, which I'de have you to know, I would not have done, had not you said first you lov'd me so extreemly, which if you do, you will never suffer me to lye in the arms of another man, whom I loath, nauseate, and detest—[Now you can write these filthy words] but what follows——Therefore I hope you will speedily find some way to free me from this unfortunate match, which was never, I assure you, of my choice, but I'm afraid 'tis already too far gone; however if you love me, as I do you, you will try what you can do, but you must help me away before to morrow, or else alas I shall be forever out of your reach, for I can defer no longer our——our——what is to follow our——speak what? our Journey into

[The Letter concludes,
the Country I suppose——Oh Woman, damn'd Woman, and Love, damn'd Love, their old Tempter, for this is one of his miracles, in a moment moment he can make those blind that cou'd see, and those see that were blind, those dumb that could speak; and those prattle who were dumb before, nay what is more than all, make these dow-bak'd, senseless, indocile animals, Women, too hard for us their Politick Lords and Rulers in a moment; But make an end of your Letter, and then I'll make an end of you thus, and all my plagues together.

{ Draws his Sword.

Mrs. Pin. O Lord, O Lord you are such a Passionate Man, Budd.

Enter Sparkish.

Spar. How now, what's here to do?

Mr. Pin. This Fool here now!

Spar. What, drawn upon your wife? you shou'd never do that but at night in the dark when you can't hurt her, this is my Sister in Law, is it not? ay; faith e'en our Country Margery, one may { Pulls aside her Hand- know her, come she and you must go dine with me, { kerchief. dinner's ready, come, but where's my Wife, is she not come home yet, where is she?

Mr. Pin. Making you a Cuckold, 'tis that they all do, as soon as they can.

Spar. VVhat the Wedding day? no, a Wife that designs to make a Cully of her Husband, will be sure to let him win the first stake of love, by the world, but come they stay dinner for us, come I'll lead down our Margery.

Mrs. Pin. No——Sir go, we'll follow you.

Spar. I will not wag without you.

Mr. Pin. This Coxcomb is a sensible torment to me amidst the greatest in the world.

Spar. Come, come Madam Margery.

Mr. Pin. No, I'll lead her my way, what { Leads her to other door, and wou'd you treat your friends with mine, for { locks her in, and returns. want of your own Wife?

I am contented my rage shou'd take breath——

[Aside.]

Spar. I told Horner this.

Mr. Pin. Come now.

Spar. Lord, how shy you are of your Wife, but let me tell you Brother, we men of wit have amongst us a saying, that Cuckolding like the small Pox comes with a fear, and you may keep your Wife as much as you will out of danger of infection, but if her constitution incline her to't, she'll have it sooner or latter by the world, say they.

Mr. Pin. What a thing is a Cuckold, that evey fool can make him ridiculous——

[Aside.]

Well Sir——But let me advise you, now you are come to be concern'd, because you suspect the danger, not to neglect the means to prevent it, especially when the greatest share of the Malady will light upon your own head, for——

How fere the kind Wife's Belly comes to swell,
The Husband breeds for her, and first is ill.

ACT 5. SCENE I.

Mr. Pinchwife's House.Enter. Mr. Pinchwife and Mrs. Pinchwife.A Table and Candle.

Mr. Pin. Come, take the Pen and make an end of the Letter, just as you intended, If you are false in a tittle, I shall soon perceive it, and punish you with this as you deserve, Lays his hand on his Sword. write what was to follow—let's see—
[You must make haste and help me away before to morrow, or else I shall be for ever out of your reach, for I can defer no longer out—]
 What follows our?—

Mrs. Pin. Must all out then Budd?—Look Mrs. Pin. takes the Pen and writes. you there then.

Mr. Pin. Let's see—[For I can defer no longer out—Wedding—Your slighted Alithea] What's the meaning of this, my Sisters name to't, speak, unriddle?

Mrs. Pin. Yes indeed, Budd.

Mr. Pin. But why her name to't, speak—speak I say?

Mrs. Pin. Ay but you'll tell her then again, if you would not tell her again.

Mr. Pin. I will not, I am stunn'd, my head turns round, speak.

Mrs. Pin. Won't you tell her indeed, and indeed.

Mr. Pin. No, speak I say.

Mrs. Pin. She'll be angry with me, but I had rather she should be angry with me than you Budd, and to tell you the truth, 'twas she made me write the Letter, and taught me what I should write.

Mr. Pin. Ha—I thought the stile was somewhat better than her own, but how cou'd she come to you to teach you, since I had lock'd you up alone?

Mrs. Pin. O through the key-hole, Budd.

Mr. Pin. But why shou'd she make you write a Letter for her to him, since she can write her self?

Mrs. Pin. Why she said because—for I was unwilling to do it.

Mr. Pin. Because what—because.

Mrs. Pin. Because lest Mr. Horner should be cruel, and refuse her, or vain afterwards, and shew the Letter, she might disown it, the hand not being hers.

Mr. Pin. How's this? ha—then I think I shall come to my self again—This changeling cou'd not invent this lye, but if she cou'd, why should she? she might think I should soon discover it—stay—

now

now I think on't too, Horner said he was sorry she had married Sparkish, and her disowning her marriage to me, makes me think she has evaded it, for Horner's sake, yet why should she take this course? but men in love are fools, women may well be so——— [Aside.]

But hark you Madam, your Sister went out in the morning, and I have not seen her within since.

Mrs. Pin. Alack a day she has been crying all day above it seems in a corner. [Aside.]

Mr. Pin. Where is she, let me speak with her.

Mrs. Pin. O Lord then he'll discover all——— [Aside.] Pray hold Budd, what d'ye mean to discover me, she'll know I have told you then, pray Budd let me talk with her first———

Mr. Pin. I must speak with her to know whether Horner ever made her any promise, and whether she be married to Sparkish or no.

Mrs. Pin. Pray dear Budd don't, till I have spoken with her, and told her that I have told you all, for she'll kill me else.

Mr. Pin. Go then, and bid her come out to me.

Mrs. Pin. Yes, yes Budd———

Mr. Pin. Let me see———

Mrs. Pin. Ple go, but she is not within to come to him, I have just got time to know of Lucy her Maid, who first set me on work, what lye I shall tell next, for I am e'en at my wits end——— [Exit Mrs. Pinchwife.]

Mr. Pin. Well I resolve it, Horner shall have her, I'd rather give him my Sister than lend him my Wife, and such an alliance will prevent his pretensions to my Wife sure, Ple make him of kin to her, and then he won't care for her. [Mrs. Pin. returns.]

Mrs. Pin. O Lord, Budd, I told you what anger you would make me with my Sister.

Mr. Pin. Won't she come hither?

Mrs. Pin. No, no, alackaday, she's a sham'd to look you in the face, and she says if you go in to her, she'll run away down stairs, and shamefully go her self to Mr. Horner, who has promis'd her marriage she says, and she will have no other, so she won't———

Mr. Pin. Did he so——— promise her marriage——— then she shall have no other, go tell her so, and if she will come and discourse with me a little concerning the means, I will about it immediately, go——— [Exit Mrs. Pin.]

His estate is equal to Sparkish's, and his extraction as much better than his, as his parts are, but my chief reason is, I'd rather be of kin to him by the name of Brother-in-law, than that of Cuckold——— Well what says she now?

Mrs. Pin. Why she says she would only have you lead her to Horner's lodging——— with whom she first will discourse the matter before she talk with you, which yet she cannot do; for alack, poor creature, she says she can't so much as look you in the face, therefore she'll come to you in a mask, and you must excuse her if she make you no answer to any question of yours, till you have brought her to Mr. Horner, and and if you will not chide her, nor question her, she'll come out to you immediately.

Mr. Pin. Let her come; I will not speak a word to her, nor require a word from her.

Mrs. Pin. Oh I forgot, besides she says, she cannot look you in the face, though through a mask, therefore wou'd desire you to put out the Candle.

Mr. Pin. I agree to all, let her make haste—[Exit Mrs. Pin. puts there 'tis out—My case is something better, & out the Candle.]
I'd rather fight with Horner, for not lying with my Sister, than for lying with my VVife, and of the two, I had rather find my Sister too forward, than my Wife; I expected no other from her free education, as she calls it, and her passion for the Town—well—Wife and Sister are names which make us expect Love and duty, pleasure and comfort, but we find 'em plagues and torments, and are equally, though differently troublesome to their keeper; for we have as much ado to get people to lye with our Sisters, as to keep 'em from lying with our Wives.

Enter Mrs. Pinchwife Masked, and in Hoods and Scarves, and a night Gown and Petticoat of All theas, in the dark.

What are you come Sister? let us go then—but first let me lock up my Wife. Mrs. Margery where are you?

Mrs. Pin. Here Budd.

Mr. Pin. Come hither, that I may lock you up, get you [Locks the door.] Come Sister, where are you now?

[Mrs. Pin. gives him her hand, but when he lets her go, she steals softly on 'other side of him, and is lead away by him for his Sister Althea.]

The Scene changes to Horner's Lodging.

Quack, Horner.

Quack. What all alone, not so much as one of your Cuckolds here, nor one of their Wives? they use to take their turns with you, as if they were to watch you.

Mr. Yes it often happens, that a Cuckold is but his VVifes spie, and is more upon family duty, when he is with her gallant abroad hindring his pleasure, than when he is at home with her playing the Gallant, but the hardest duty a married woman imposes upon a lover is keeping her husband company always.

Quack. And his fondness wearies you almost as soon as hers.

Mr. A Pox, keeping a Cuckold company after you have had his Wife, is as tiresome as the company of a Country Squire to a witty fellow of the Town, when he has got all his Money.

Quack. And as at first a man makes a friend of the Husband to get the VVife, so at last you are fain to fall out with the VVife to be rid of the Husband.

Mr. Ay, most Cuckold-makers are true Courtiers, when once a poor man has crack'd his credit for 'em, they can't abide to come near him.

Quack.

Quack. But at first to draw him in are so sweet, so kind, so dear, just as you are to Pinchwife, but what becomes of that intrigue with his Wife?

Hor. A Pox he's as furly as an Alderman that has been bit, and since he's so coy, his Wife's kindness is in vain, for she's a silly innocent.

Quack. Did she not send you a Letter by him?

Hor. Yes, but that's a riddle I have not yet solv'd——allow the poor creature to be willing, she is silly too, and he keeps her up so close——

Quack. Yes, so close that he makes her but the more willing, and adds but revenge to her love, which two when met seldom fail of satisfying each other one way or other.

Hor. What here's the man we are talking of I think.

Enter Mr. Pinchwife leading in his Wife masked, Muffled, and in her Sisters Gown.

Hor. Pshaw.

Quack. Bringing his Wife to you is the next thing to bringing a Love Letter from her.

Hor. What means this?

Mr. Pin. The last time you know Sir I brought you a love Letter, now you see a Mistress, I think you'll say I am a civil man to you.

Hor. Ay the Devil take me will I say thou art the civillest man I ever met with, and I have known some; I fancy, I understand thee now, better than I did the Letter, but hark thee in thy ear——

Mr. Pin. What?

Hor. Nothing but the usual question man, is she sound on thy word?

Mr. Pin. What you take her for a Wench, and me for a Pimp?

Hor. Pshaw, Wench and Pimp, paw words, I know thou art an honest fellow, and hast a great acquaintance among the Ladies, and perhaps hast made love for me rather than let me make love to thy Wife——

Mr. Pin. Come Sir, in short, I am for no fooling.

Hor. Not I neither, therefore prithee let's see her face presently, make her show man, art thou sure I don't know her?

Mr. Pin. I am sure you do know her, if she's the same.

Hor. A Pox why dost thou bring her to me then?

Mr. Pin. Because she's a Relation of mine.

Hor. Is she faith man, then thou art still more civil and obliging, dear Rogue.

Mr. Pin. Who desired me to bring her to you.

Hor. Then she is obligingly, dear Rogue.

Mr. Pin. You'll make her welcome for my sake I hope.

Hor. I hope she is handsome enough to make her self welcome; prithee let her unmask.

Mr. Pin. Do you speak to her, she won'd never be rul'd by me.

Jun. Hor. Madam!—[Mrs. Pin whispers to Hor.] She says she must speak with me in private, withdraw praythee.

Mr. Pin. She's unwilling it seems I shou'd know all her unbecom conduct in this business.

Well then I'll leave you together, and hope when I am gone you'll agree, if not you and I shan't agree Sir.

Hor. What means the Fool?—if she and I agree 'tis no matter what you and I do.

[Whispers to Mrs. Pin, who makes signs with her hand or him to be gone.]

bus Mr. Pin. In the mean time I'll fetch a Parson, and find out Sparkish and disabuse him.

You wou'd have me fetch a Parson, would you not, well then—

Now I think I am rid of her, and shall have no more trouble with her—Our Sisters and Daughters like Usurers money, are safest, when put out, but our Wives, like their writings, never safe, but in our Closets under Lock and Key.

[Exit Mrs. Pin.]

Enter Boy. Sir Jasper Fidget Sir is coming up.

Hor. Here's the trouble of a Cuckold, now we are talking of a pox on him, has he not enough to do to hinder his Wifes sport, but he must other womens too.—Step in here Madam.

Enter Sir Jasper. Sir Jasper.

Sir. Jas. My best and dearest Friend.

Hor. The old stile, Doctor—

Well be short, for I am busie, what would your impertinent Wive have now?

Sir. Jas. Well, guess'd y^e faith, for I do come from her.

Hor. To invite me to supper, tell her I can't come, good.

Sir. Jas. Nay, now you are out faith, for my Lady and the whole knot of the virtuous gang, as they call themselves, are resolv'd upon a frolick of coming to you to night in a Masquerade, and are all dress'd already.

Hor. I shan't be at home.

Sir. Jas. Lord how churlish he is to women—nay praythee don't disappoint 'em, they'll think 'tis my fault, praythee don't, I'll send in the Banquet and the Fiddles, but make no noise on't, for the poor virtuous Rogues would not have it known for the world, that they go a Masquerading, and they would come to no mans Ball, but yours.

Hor. Well, well—get you gone, and tell 'em if they come, 'twill be at the peril of their honour and yours.

Sir. Jas. Heh, he, he—We'll trust you for that, farewell—

[Exit Sir Jasper.]

Hor. Doctor anon you too shall be my guest.

But now I'm going to a private feast.

The Scene changes to the Piazza of Covent Garden.

Sparkish, Pinchwife.

Spar. But who would have thought a woman could have been false to me, by the world, I could not have thought it. Spar. with the Letter in his hand.

Mr. Pin. You were for giving and taking Liberty, she has taken it only Sir, now you find in that Letter, you are a frank person, and so is she you see there.

Spar. Nay, if this be her hand—for I never saw it.

Mr. Pin. 'Tis no matter whether that be her hand or no, I am sure this hand at her desire led her to Mr. Horner, with whom I left her just now, to go fetch a Parson to 'em at their desire too, to deprive you of her for ever, for it seems yours was but a mock marriage.

Spar. Indeed she wou'd needs have it that 'twas Harcourt himself in a Parsons Habit, that married us, but I'm sure he told me 'twas his Brother Ned.

Mr. Pin. O there 'tis out, and you were deceiv'd not she, for you are such a frank person—but I must be gone—you'll find her at Mr. Horner's, go and believe your eyes. [Exit Mr. Pin.]

Spar. Nay I'll to her, and call her as many Crocodiles, Syrens, Harpies, and other heathenish names, as a Poet would do a Mistress, who had refus'd to hear his suit, nay more his Verses on her.

But stay, is not that she following a Torch at t'other end of the Piazza, and from Horner's certainly—'tis so—

Enter. Alithea following a Torch, and Lucy behind.

You are well met Madam, though you don't think so; what you have made a short visit to Mr. Horner, but I suppose you'll return to him presently, by that time the Parson can be with him.

Ali. Mr. Horner, and the Parson Sir—

Spar. Come Madam, no more dissembling, no more jilting, for I am no more a frank person.

Alithea. How's this.

Lucy. So, 'twill work I see—

Spar. Con'd you find out no easie Country Fool to abuse? none but me, a Gentleman of wit and Pleasure about the Town, but it was your pride to be too hard for a man of parts, unworthy false woman, false as a friend that lends a man money to lose, false as dice, who undo those that trust all they have to 'em. [Aside.]

Lucy. He has been a great bubble by his families as they say—

Ali. You have been too merry Sir at your wedding dinner sure. [Aside.]

Spar. What d'y mock me too?

Ali. Or you have been deluded.

Spar. By you.

Ali. Let me understand you.

Spar. Have you the confidence, I should call it something else, since you know your guilt, to stand my just reproaches? you did not write an impudent Letter to Mr. Horner, who I find now has club'd with you in deluding me with his aversion for women, that I might not foolishly suspect him for my Rival.

Lucy.

Lucy. D'y think the Gentleman can be jealous now Madam—

[Aside.

Ali. I write a Letter to Mr. Horner!

Spar. Nay Madam, do not deny it, your Brother shew'd it me just now, and told me likewise he left you at Horner's lodging to fetch a Parson, to marry you to him, and I wish you joy Madam, joy, joy, and to him too, much joy, and to my self more joy for not marrying you.

Ali. So I find my Brother would break off the match, and I can consent to't, since I see this Gentleman can be made jealous. [Aside. O Lucy, by his rude usage and jealousy, he makes me almost afraid I am married to him, art thou sure 'twas Harcourt himself, and no Parson that married us.

Spar. No Madam, I thank you, I suppose that was a contrivance too of Mr. Horner's and yours, to make Harcourt play the Parson, but I would as little as you have him one now, no not for the world, for shall I tell you another truth, I never had any passion for you, 'till now, for now I hate you, 'tis true I might have married your portion, as other men of parts of the Town do sometimes, and so your Servant, and to shew my unconcernedness, Ple come to your wedding, and resign you with as much joy as I would a stale wench to a new Cully, nay with as much joy as I would after the first night, if I had been married to you, there's for you, and so yout Servant, Servant.

[Exit Spar.

Ali. How was I deceiv'd in a man?

Lucy. You'l believe then a fool may be made jealous now? for that easiness in him that suffers him to be led by a Wife, will likewise permit him to be perswaded against her by others.

Ali. But marry Mr. Horner, my Brother does not intend it sure; if I thought he did, I would take thy advice, and Mr. Harcourt for my Husband, and now I wish, that if there be any over-wise woman of the Town, who like me would marry a fool, for fortune, liberty or title, first that her husband may love Play, and be a Cully to all the Town, but her, and suffer none but fortune to be mistress of his purse, then if for liberty, that he may send her into the Country under the conduct of some housewifely mother-in-law; and if for title, may the world give 'em none but that of Cuckold, Lucy. And for her greater Curse Madam, may he not deserve it.

Ali. Away impertinent—is not this my old Lady Lanterlus?

Lucy. Yes Madam. [And here I hope we shall find Mr. Harcourt—

[Aside.

[Exit Ali. Lucy.

The Scene changes again to Horner's Lodging.

Horner, Lady Fidget, Mrs. Daynty Fidget, Mrs. Squeamish, A Table, Banquet, and Bottles.

Hor. A Pox they are come too soon—before I have sent back my new—Mistress, all I have now to do, is to lock her in, that they may not see her—

La. Fid. That we may be sure of our welcome, we have brought our entertainment with us, and are resolv'd to treat thee, dear Toad.

Syn. And that we may be merry to purpose, have left Sir Jasper and my old Lady Squeamish quarrelling at home at Baggammon.

Squeam. Therefore let us make use of our time, lest they should chance to interrupt us.

La. Fid. Let us sit then.

Hor. First that you may be private, let me lock this door, and that, and Ple wait upon you presently.

La. Fid. No Sir, shut 'em only and your lips for ever, for we must trust you as much as our women.

Hor. You know all vanity's kill'd in me, I have no occasion for talking.

La. Fid. Now Ladies, supposing we had drank each of us our two Bottles, let us speak the truth of our hearts.

Dayn. and Squeam. Agreed.

La. Fid. By this brimmer, for truth is no where else to be found, [Not in thy heart false man.

Hor. You have found me a true man I'm sure.

La. Fid. Not every way—

But let us sit and be merry.

Lady Fidget sings:

I.

Why should our damn'd Tyrants oblige us to live

On the pittance of Pleasure which they only give?

We must not rejoyce,

With Wine and with noise.

In vain we must wake in a dull bed alone,

Whilst to our warm Rival the Bottle, they're gone.

Then lay aside charms,

And take up these arms *

* The Glasses.

2.

'Tis Wine only gives 'em their Courage and Wit,

Because we live sober to men we submit.

If for Beauties you'd pass,

Take a lick of the Glass,

'Twill mend your complexions, and when they are gone,

The best you have is the red of the Grape.

Then Sisters lay 'em on,

And dam a good shape.

Dayn. Dear Brimmer, well in token of our openness and plain dealing, let us throw our Masks over our heads.

Hor.

Hor. So 'twill come to the Glasses anon.

Squeam. Lovely Brimmer, let me enjoy him first.

La. Fid. No, I never part with a Gallant, till I've try'd him. Dear Brimmer that mak'st our Husbands short-sighted.

Dayn. And our bashful gallants bold.

Squeam. And for want of a Gallant, the Butler lovely in our eyes, drink Eunuch.

La. Fid. Drink thou representative of a Husband, damn a Husband.

Dayn. And as it were a Husband, an old keeper.

Squeam. And an old Grandmother.

Hor. And an English Bawd, and a French Chirurgeon.

La. Fid. Ay we have all reason to curse 'em.

Hor. For my sake Ladies.

La. Fid. No, for our own, for the first spoils all young Gallants' industry.

Dayn. And the others art makes 'em bold only with common women.

Squeam. And rather run the hazard of the vile disemper amongst them, than of a denial amongst us.

Dayn. The filthy Toads chuse Mistresses now, as they do Stuffs, for having been fancy'd and worn by others.

Squeam. For being common and cheap.

La. Fid. Whilst women of quality, like the richest Stuffs I've untumbled, and unask'd for.

Hor. Ay neat, and cheap, and new, often they think best.

Dayn. No Sir, the Beasts will be known by a Mistress longer than by a suit.

Squeam. And 'tis not for cheapness neither.

La. Fid. No, for the vain fopps will take up Druggets, and embroider 'em, but I wonder at the depraved appetites of witty men, they use to be out of the common road, and hate imitation, pray tell me beast, when you were a man, why you rather chose to club with a multitude in a common house, for an entertainment, than to be the only guest at a good Table.

Hor. Why faith ceremony and expectation are unufferable to those that are sharp bent, people always eat with the best stomach at an ordinary, where every man is snatching for the best bit.

La. Fid. Though he get a cut over the fingers, but I have heard people eat most heartily of another man's meat, that is, what they do not pay for.

Hor. When they are sure of their welcome and freedom, for ceremony in love and eating, is as ridiculous as in fighting, falling on briskly is all should be done in those occasions.

La. Fid. Well then let me tell you Sir, there is no where more freedom than in our houses, and we take freedom from a young person as a sign of good breeding, and a person may be as free as he pleases with us, as frolick, as game some, as wild as he will.

Hor.

Hor. Havn't I heard you all declaim against wild men,

La. Fid. Yes, but for all that, we think wildness in a man, as desirable a quality, as in a Duck, or Rabbit; a tame man, foh,

Hor. I know not, but your reputations frightened me, as much as your faces invited me.

La. Fid. Our Reputation, Lord! Why should you not think, that we women make use of our Reputation, as you men of yours, only to deceive the world with less suspicion; our virtue is like the State-man's Religion, the Quakers Word, the Gamesters Oath, and the Great Mans Honour, but to cheat those that trust us.

Squeam. And that Demureness, Coyness, and Modesty, that you see in our Faces in the Boxes at Plays, is as much a sign of a kind woman, as a Vizard-mask in the Pit.

Dayn. For I assure you, women are least mask'd, when they have the Velvet Vizard on.

La. Fid. You wou'd have found us modest women in our denys only.

Squeam. Our bashfulness is only the reflection of the Men's.

Dayn. VVe blush, when they are shame-fac'd,

Hor. I beg your pardon Ladies, I was deceiv'd in you civilly, but why, that mighty pretence to Honour?

La. Fid. We have told you; but sometimes 'twas for the same reason you men pretend business often, to avoid ill company, to enjoy the better, and more privately those you love.

Hor. But why, wou'd you ne'er give a friend a wink then?

La. Fid. Faith, your Reputation frightened us as much, as ours did you, you were so notoriously lewd.

Hor. And you so seemingly honest.

La. Fid. Was that all that deceiv'd you?

Hor. And so expensive— you allow freedom you say.

La. Fid. Ay, ay.

Hor. That I was afraid of losing my little money, as well as my little time, both which my other pleasures required.

La. Fid. Money, foh—you talk like a little fellow now, do such as we expect money?

Hor. I beg your pardon, Madam, I must confess, I have heard that great Ladies, like great Merchants, set but the higher prizes upon what they have, because they are not in necessity of taking the first offer.

Dayn. Such as we, make skill of our hearts?

Squeam. We bri'd for our Love? Foh.

Hor. With your pardon, Ladies, I know, like great men in Offices, you seem to exact flattery and attendance only from your Followers, but you have receivers about you, and such fees to pay, a man is afraid to pass your Grants; besides we must let you win at Cards, or we lose your hearts; and if you make an assignation, 'tis at a Goldsmiths, Jewellers, or China-house, where for your Honour, you deposit to him, he must pawn his, to the punctual Citty, and so paying for what you take up, pays for what he takes up.

K

Dayn.

Hor. Do you all go in there, whilst I send 'em away, and Boy do you desire 'em to stay below, till I come, which shall be immediately.

Exeunt Sir Jasper, Lady Squeam, Lady Finger, Mistress Dainty, Squeamish.

Boy. Yes Sir.

Exit Horner at other door, and returns with Mistress Pinchwife.

Hor. You won't not take my advice to be gone home, before your Husband came back, he'll now discover all, yet pray my Dearest be persuaded to go home, and leave the rest to my management, I'll let you down the back way.

Mrs. Pin. I don't know the way home, so I don't.

Hor. My man shall wait upon you.

Mrs. Pin. No, don't you believe, that I'll go at all; what are you weary of me already?

Hor. No, my life, 'tis that I may love you long, 'tis to secure my love, and your Reputation with your Husband, he'll never receive you again else.

Mrs. Pin. What care I, I've think to frighten me with that; I don't intend to go to him again; you shall be my Husband now.

Hor. I cannot be your Husband, Dearest, since you are married to him.

Mrs. Pin. O would you make me believe that——don't I see every day at London here, women leave their first Husbands, and go, and live with other men as their Wives, pin, pin, you'd make me angry, but that I love you so mainly.

Hor. So, they are coming up——In again, Sir, I hear Exit Mistress

'em: Well a silly Mistress, is like a weak place, soon got soon lost, a man has scarce time for plunder, she betrays her Husband first to her Gallant, and then her Gallant to her Husband.

Enter Pinchwife, Althea, Harcourt, Sparkish, Lucy, and a Parson.

Mr. Pin. Come, Madam, 'tis not the sudden change of your dress, the confidence of your asseverations, and your false witness there, shall persuade me, I did not bring you hither, just now, here's my witness, who cannot deny it, since you must be confronted with Mr. Horner, did not I bring this Lady to you just now?

Hor. Now must I wrong the woman for another's sake, but that's no new thing with me; for in these cases I am still on the criminals side, against the innocent.

Mrs. Pin. Pray, Sir, I must be impudent, and try my luck, my prudence uses to be too hard for truth.

Mr. Pin. What you are studying an evasion, or excuse for her. Speak Sir.

Hor. No faith, I am something backward only, to speak in women's affairs or disputes.

Mr. Pin. Hide you, I pray.

Ann. Ay, pray Sir do, pray satisfy him.

Hor. Then truly, you did bring that Lady to me just now.

Mr. Pin. O ho—

Alb. How Sir—

Hor. How, Horner!

Alb. What mean you Sir, I always took you for a man of Honour?

Hor. Ay, so much a man of Honour, that I must save my Mistress, I thank you, come what will on't.

Spar. So if I had had her, she'd have made me believe, the Moon had been made of a Christmas eve.

Lucy. Now could I speak, if I durst, and solve the Riddle, who am the Author of it.

Alb. O unfortunate Woman? a combination against my Honour, which most concerns me now, because you share in my disgrace, Sir, and it is your censure which I must now suffer, that troubles me, not theirs.

Hor. Madam, then have no trouble, you shall now see 'tis possible for me to love too, without being jealous. I will not only believe your innocence my self, but make all the world believe it.

Horner I must now be concern'd for this Ladies Honour. [Exit to Horner.]

Hor. And I must be concern'd for a Ladies Honour too.

Mr. This Lady has her Honour, and I will protect it.

Hor. My Lady has not her Honour, but has given it me to keep, and I will preserve it.

Hor. I understand you not.

Hor. I would not have you.

Mr. Pin. What's the matter with 'em all.

Mr. Pin. Come, come, Mr. Horner, no more disputing, here's the Parson, I brought him not in vain.

Hor. No Sir, I'll employ him, if this Lady please.

Mr. Pin. How, what d'ye mean?

Spar. Ay, what does he mean?

Hor. Why, I have refus'd your Sister to him, he has my consent.

Mr. Pin. But he has not mine Sir, a woman's injur'd Honour, no more than a man's, can be repaired, or satisfied by any, but him that first wronged it; and you shall marry her presently, or—

[Lays his hand on his Sword.]

Enter to them Mistress Pinchwife.

Mistress Pin. O Lord, they'll kill poor Mr. Horner, besides he shan't marry her, whilst I stand by, and look on, I'll not lose my second Husband so.

Mr. Pin. What do I see?

Alb. My Sister in my cloaths?

Spar. Ha?

Mr. Pin. May, pray now don't quarrel about finding work for the Parson,

Pinch, he shall marry me to Mr. Horner; for now I believe, you have enough of me. [To Mr. Pinchwife.]

Hor. Damn'd, damn'd loving Changeling.

Mrs. Pin. Pray Sister, pardon me for telling so many lyes of you.

Hor. I suppose the Riddle is plain now.

Lucy. No, that must be my work, good Sir hear me.

[Kneels to Mr. Pinchwife, who stands doggedly, with his hat over his eyes.]

Mr. Pin. I will never hear woman again, but make 'em all silent, thus—

[Offers to draw upon his Wife.]

Hor. No, that must not be.

Mr. Pin. You then shall go first, 'tis all one to me.

[Offers to draw on Hor. Stops by Harcourt.]

Mr. Field—

Enter Sir Jasper Fidget, Lady Squeamish,

Mrs. Dainty Fidget, Mrs. Squeamish.

Sir. Jas. What's the matter, what's the matter, pray what's the matter Sir, I beseech you communicate Sir.

Mr. Pin. Why my Wife has communicated Sir, as your Wife may have done too Sir, if she knows him Sir—

Sir. Jas. Pshaw, with him, ha, ha, he.

Mr. Pin. D'ye mock me Sir, a Cuckold is a kind of a wild Beast, have a care Sir—

Sir. Jas. No sure, you mock me Sir—he cuckold you! it can't be, ha, ha, he, why, I'll tell you Sir. [Offers to whisper.]

Mr. Pin. I tell you again, he has whor'd My Wife, and yours too, if he knows her, and all the women he comes near, 'tis not his dissembling, his hypocrisy can wheedle me.

Sir. Jas. How, does he dissemble, is he a Hypocrite? nay then—how—Wife—Sister is he an Hypocrite?

Old La. Squeam. An Hypocrite, a dissembler, speak young Harlotry, speak how?

Sir. Jas. Nay then—O my my head too—O thou libinous Lady!

Old La. Squeam. O thou Harlotting, Harlotry, hast thou don't then?

Sir. Jas. Speak good Horner, art thou a dissembler, a Rogue? hast thou—

Hor. Soh—

Lucy. Ple fetch you off, and her too, if she will but hold her tongue.

[Aparts to Hor.]

Hor. Canst thou? I'll give thee—

[Aparts to Luc.]

Lucy to Mr. Pin. Pray have but patience to hear me Sir, who am the unfortunate cause of all this confusion, your Wife is innocent, I only culpable; for I put her upon telling you all these lyes, concerning my Mistress, in order to the breaking off the match between Mr. Sparkish and her, to make way for Mr. Harcourt.

[Aparts to Harcourt.]

Spark. Did you so eternal Rotten tooth? then it seems my Mistress was not false to me, I was only deceiv'd by you. Brother that should have been, now man of conduct, who is a frank person now, to be ing your Wife to her Lover—ha—

Lucy. I assure you Sir, she came not to Mr. Hornor out of love, for she loves him no more—

Mrs. Pin. Hold, I sold lyes for you, but you shall tell none for me, for I do love Mr. Hornor with all my soul, and no body shall say me nay, pray don't you go to make poor Mr. Hornor believe to the contrary, 'tis spitefully done of you, I'm sure.

Horn. Peace, Dear Idiot.

Mrs. Pin. Nay, I will not peace.

Horn. Not 'till I make you.

Enter Dorilant, Quack.

Dor. Hornor, your Servant, I am the Doctors Guest, he must excuse our intrusion.

Quack. But what's the matter Gentlemen, for Heavens sake, what's the matter?

Horn. Oh 'tis well you are come—'tis a censorious world we live in, you may have brought me a reprieve, or else I had dyed for a crime, I never committed, and these innocent Ladies had suffer'd with me, therefore pray satisfy these worthy, honourable, jealous Gentlemen—that—

Quack. O I understand you, is that all—Sir Jasper, by heavens and upon the word of a Physician Sir,—

Sir Jas. Nay I do believe you truly—pardon me my virtuous Lady, and dear of honour.

Old La. Squam. What then all's right again.

Sir Jas. Ay, ay, and now let us satisfy him too. They whisper with Mr. Pin. An Eunuch? pray no fooling with me.

Quack. Ple bring half the Chyrurgeons in Town to swear it.

Mrs. Pin. They—they'll swear a man that bled to death through his wounds died of an Apoplexy.

Quack. Pray hear me Sir—why all the Town has heard the report of him.

Mrs. Pin. But does all the Town believe it.

Quack. Pray inquire a little, and first of all these.

Mrs. Pin. I'm sure when I left the Town he was the lowest fellow in't.

Quack. I tell you Sir he has been in France since, pray ask but these Ladies and Gentlemen, your friend Mr. Dorilant, Gentlemen and Ladies, han't you all heard the late sad report of poor Mr. Hornor?

All Lad. Ay, ay, ay.

Dor. Why thou jealous Fool dost thou doubt it, he's an errant French Capon.

Mrs. Pin. 'Tis false Sir, you shall not disparage poor Mr. Hornor, as to my certain knowledge—

Lucy

Lucy. ~~hold~~

Squame. Stop her mouth.

Old La. Fid. Upon my honour Sir, 'tis as true.

[Aside to Lucy.]

[To Pinch.]

Dayn. D'y think we would have been seen in his company—

Squame. Trust our unsported reputations with him!

Old La. Fid. This you ger, and we too, by trusting your secret to a fool—

[Aside to Hor.]

Hor. Peace Madam, — well Doctor, is not this a good design that carries a man on unsuspected, and brings him off safe.—[Aside to Quack.]

Mr. Pin. Well, if this were true, but my Wife—

[Aside.]

[Dorilant whispers with Mrs. Pinch.]

Ali. Come Brother, your Wife is yet innocent you see, but have a care of too strong an imagination, lest like an overconcern'd timorous Gamester, by fancying an unlucky cast, it should come, Women and Fortune are truest still to those that trust 'em.

Lucy. And any wild thing grows but the more fierce and hungry for being kept up, and more dangerous to the Keeper.

Ali. There's doctrine for all Husbands Mr. Harcourt.

Har. I edify Madam so much, that I am impatient till I am one.

Dor. And I edify so much by example I will never be one.

Spér. And because I will not disparage my parts I'll ne're be one.

Hor. And I alas can't be one.

Mr. Pin. But I must be one—against my will to a Country-Wife, with a Country-murrain to me.

Mrs. Pin. And I must be a Country Wife still too I find, for I can't, like a City one, be rid of my musty Husband and do what I list. [Aside.]

Hor. Now Sir I must pronounce your Wife Innocent, though I blush whilst I do it, and I am the only man by her now expos'd to shame, which I will streight drown in Wine, as you shall your suspicion, and the Ladies troubles we'll divert with a Ballet, Doctor where are your Maskers.

Lucy. Indeed she's Innocent Sir, I am her witness, and her end of coming out was but to see her Sisters Wedding, and what she has said to your face of her love to Mr. Horner was but the usual innocent revenge on a Husbands jealousy, was it not Madam, speak—

Mrs. Pin. Since you'll have me tell more lyes—[Aside to Lucy and Horner.] Yes indeed Budd.

Mr. Pin. For my own sake I wou'd all believe.

Cuckolds like Lovers shou'd themselves deceive.

But—

[Sighs—]

His honour is least safe, (too late I find)

Who trusts it with a foolish Wife or Friend.

A Dance of Cuckolds.

Hor. Vain Fopps, but court, and dress, and keep a putter,

To pass for Womens men, with one another.

But he who aims by women to be priz'd,

First by the men you see must be despis'd.

EPILOGUE spoken by Mrs. Knap.

*N*ow you the Vigorous, who daily here
O're Vizard Mask, in publick dominoer,
And what you'd do to her if in Place where;
May have the confidence, to cry come out,
Tet when she says lead on, you are not stout;
But to your well-drest Brother straight turn round
And cry, Pox on her Ned, she can't be sound:
Then sink away, a fresh one to engage,
With so much seeming heat and loving Rage,
Tou'd frighten listning Attress on the Stage;
Till she at last has seen you huffing come,
And talk of keeping in the Tyreing-Room
Tet cannot be provok'd to lead her home;
Next you Fallstuffs of fifty, who beset
Tour Buckram Maidenheads, which your friends get;
And whilst to them, you of Atchievements boast,
They share the booty, and laugh at your cost.
In fine, you Essent Boyes, both Old and Young,
Who would be thought so eager, brisk, and strong,
Tet do the Ladies, not their Husbands, wrong:
Whose Purfes for your manhood make excuse,
And keep your Flanders Mares for shew, not use;
Encourag'd by our Womans Man to day,
A Horners part may vainly think to play;
And may Intreagues so basely disown
That they may doubted be by few or none,
May kiss the Cards at Picquet, Flombre,—Lu,
And so be taught to kiss the Lady too;
But Gallants, have a care faith, what you do.
The World, which to no man his due will give,
Ton by experience know you can deceive,
And men may still believe you Vigorous,
But then we Women,—there's no caus ning us.
